3 HURT AS FIRE RAKES SHIP IN E. BOSTON DRYDOCK

Ship Fire Snapped From Air

DARING RESCUE HIGH ABOVE PIER MADE

Four alarms were sounded in rapid succession today, a fireman was injured and an elderly man, trapped by smoke, was rescued from a precarious perch 65 feet above the ground during a fire at Simpson's Drydock, East Boston.

It was the second time in two weeks that multiple alarms were sounded for a ship blaze on the waterfront, the nitrate-laden steamer burning last week and causing five alarms to be sounded at Mystic Docks.

Badly damaged today was part of the drydock and the United Fruit Company steamer San Gil, undergoing painting and repairs.

Threatened were the United Fruit steamer San Bruno, in drydock at the opposite side of the pier; the Cities Service Co. oil tanker Halo, which went aground last week on Peddock's island with 325,000 gallons of oil, and the steamer Evangeline.

The fire is believed to have started in oil spilled when the tanker Halo was unloaded after being brought to drydock.

FLAMES SHOOT 40 FEET

Quickly the flames spread, shooting 30 to 40 feet in the air, racing up the greasy superstructure of a traveling crane on the pier between the two drydocks and sending up thick clouds of heavy, oily smoke, which blotted out sight of the sky.

In his control house atop the crane, 65 feet above the dock, Charles Harnden, 65, the operator, was driven out on the greasy railway, where he crawled on his hands and knees, choking and crying for help.

Francis Carlon, 31, of 465 Sumner street, East Boston, a rigger employed at the drydock, realizing the plight of the elderly operator, slung a coil of rope around his shoulders and went up to the rescue, climbing a slippery cable hand over hand.

The rope was knotted around Harnden's waist, and Carlon lowered him to the dock. Then Carlon came back down the cable, but slipped 12 feet from the ground, landing heavily on his back.

Both were taken to East Boston Relief Hospital.

SPREADS RAPIDLY

Thomas Mellyn, 40, of Elmore street, Roxbury, attached to Ladder 8, went to the Relief Hospital a short time later, suffering from lacerated hands.

Police Aid Brighton Man in Dash to Save Mother

In a race against time to save his mother, Charles Mealey, of Washington street, Brighton, dashed by automobile to Salem Hospital today to stand by for an emergency blood transfusion.

Boston police, notified by Mealey of his mission, radioed police of Revere, Chelsea and Lynn to assist in clearing the way through heavy mid-afternoon North Shore traffic.

Mealey's mother, Mrs. Margaret Mealey, 65, of Nichols street, Salem, has been a patient at the hospital for two weeks.

Although released Sunday evening, she took a sudden turn for the worse upon arriving home and in a few hours was back at the hospital.

Mealey, a Works Progress Administration worker, was at home today when he received a telephone call from his brother in Salem that a transfusion would be necessary. He asked that Mealey come at once in case his blood was the type needed.

Mrs. Mealey called her brother, William Marr of Somerville, who sped to Brighton, found Mealey waiting anxiously and then the two started their journey. Mealey, in the meantime, had called the police.

The Brighton man is the father of seven children, five boys and two girls.

Teacher Indignant, Pays Speeding Fine

Unmistakably indignant, Miss Edith M. Snaill, 60-year-old teacher at Wellesley College, paid $5 fine today in Newton court on a charge of speeding at 54 miles an hour on the Worcester turnpike in Newton Highlands.

Pleading not guilty, Miss Snaill insisted that she had been driving at a moderate rate. To police, after she had paid her fine, she declared her arrest was "an outrage."

Disease-Laden Pigs And Mice Stolen From Hospital

Lowell, March 23—Lowell General Hospital today reported theft of a "cargo of living death"—15 guinea pigs and 12 white mice, inoculated with disease germs.

Some were infected with tuberculosis germs, and others with more contagious diseases, Superintendent Christine McLeod reported.

Police started an immediate search of the neighborhood fearing that contact with some of the animals might prove dangerous because of their contagious nature.

Superintendent MacLeod termed the theft a "very serious loss" because of its effect on the experimentation and laboratory work being carried on in the hospital.

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Detroit, March 23—Governor Frank Murphy today called a conference with Walter P. Chrysler and John L. Lewis, president of the CIO and master mind of the automobile strikes, for tomorrow morning in his offices in Lansing.

The Murphy-Chrysler-Lewis conference was the Governor's most dramatic move in his efforts to bring about a settlement of the strike in eight Chrysler plants here, which has been in progress since March 8.

Governor Murphy spoke to Chrysler and Lewis over long distance telephone and it is understood they agreed to meet.

Formal telegrams inviting the chairman of the board of Chrysler Corporation and the labor leader to the conference were sent this morning. In the identical telegrams to Chrysler and Lewis, Governor Murphy warned against "possible unfortunate consequences" unless the meeting were held.

Governor Murphy in his telegrams pointed out that unless peace were brought about in the great Detroit strike he might have to call out the state militia to oust the 6000 sit-down strikers from the Chrysler plants.

The governor said to newspaper men he expected a settlement of

Berlin, March 23 (AP)—Germany sent a man to Switzerland today to tell Dr. Ernest (Putzi) Hanfstaengl, in effect:

"Come home; all is forgiven."

(The Harvard-educated Hanfstaengl, reported sent to Spain in February on a secret mission for Adolf Hitler, turned up, instead, at a Zurich hotel last week.)

Rudolf Hess, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's deputy in Nazi party matters, dispatched his chief of staff, Herr Spenger, to Zurich. It was learned Spenger would try to persuade Dr. Hanfstaengl to come back and would assure him that his failure to go to Spain would not be counted against him.

He can live in Germany unmolested, he will be told, and will even have "a scientific task."

RESCUER SIGHTS HELPLESS SHIP

BULLETIN

Coast Guard headquarters today announced the cutter Chelan reported it had sighted the distressed Norwegian steamer, Bjerkli, 250 miles south of Sable Island. The Chelan reported the steamer was 50 miles south of where she was thought to be.

Two luxury passenger liners and seven other rescue craft today searched the "Graveyard of the Atlantic" for the Norwegian tramp steamer Bjerkli, foundering and drifting in storm-tossed waves about 800 miles east of Nantucket Lightship.

The Bjerkli, with a crew of 24 men abroad, was reported helpless in a heavy, wallowing sea.

True to tradition of the sea, they swerved from their regular lanes to take up the grim race toward the stricken ship.

CUTTER TO RESCUE

Out of Boston, heading into mountainous seas, the coast guard cutter Chelan, dashed out toward the vessel. Its latest report was that she was about 30 miles from the original position given by the Bjerkli.

The coast guard cutter Champlain, out of New York, broke away from ice patrol duty to race to the scene, but, according to latest reports was more than 150 miles away.

Five other vessels began converging on the Bjerkli from various points in this rescue dash.

The Bjerkli's position was believed at first to be latitude 40.42 north and longitude 59.05 west. Reports at 10 o'clock indicated she was drifting south when her position was received by the Hamburg at 39.30 north and 60.20 west.

While the Hamburg at 8:40 a. m. had radioed the Radio Marine Corp. at Chatham it was "in sight" of the vessel, a report before noon stated that the Hamburg was circling the vicinity but did not know the exact location. The Bjerkli was reported not in sight the Chrysler strike within a few hours after he gets Chrysler and Lewis at the same conference table.

TELEGRAMS HE SENT

Here is the text of the identical wires:

"Following open hearing of pending controversy between Chrysler Corporation and United Automobile Workers' Union, order has been duly issued by the Wayne circuit court requiring evacuation of occupied plants. Writs have now been issued and placed in the hands of the sheriff of Wayne county to enforce proper compliance with order.

"It is expected that sheriff will request assistance of state authorities in execution of writ. While respecting rights of workers and seeking to advance their proper interests by lawful means, state government cannot forsake its responsibility and will employ all necessary and available means in this and similar cases to uphold public authority in this state and protect property rights in the interest of the general public.

CITES COSTLY MEASURES

"In view of large interests at stake, however, and desirability of ascertaining whether adjustment is possible before taking extreme and costly measures with possible unfortunate consequences, I am requesting that you confer with me and Mr. John L. Lewis (In the wire to Lewis the text read with me and Mr. Walter P. Chrysler) in an office at Lansing on Wednesday, March 24, at 11 o'clock in the morning, in a joint effort to find prompt and satisfactory solution without unwarranted delay in enforcement of court's order.

(Signed)
"FRANK MURPHY,
"Governor of Michigan."

The telegrams to Chrysler and Lewis were a formality, for it was understood the Governor already had the assurance of both men that they would confer with him in Lansing.

Privately, negotiations to bring about such a conference have been going on for several days. Lewis from the outset declared he would be willing to meet with Chrysler and Governor Murphy on a "half hour's notice."

Chrysler, however, had been unwilling to meet with the labor leader while his plants were held by strikers.

OPPOSE SOLE BARGAINER

James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator, helped set the stage for the conference. Through him Governor Murphy obtained assurance of Lewis he would be present.

Gov. Murphy himself took up the job of persuading Chrysler to enter into the conference.

The chief issue of the Chrysler strike has been over labor's demand that the United Automobile Workers' Union be recognized as the sole bargaining agency for all of Chrysler's 67,000 workers.

Chrysler executives in numerous conferences in Detroit steadfastly resisted this demand. They agreed the corporation would always meet with the union, or any other group of employes, but would not recognize the UAW as the sole bargaining agency.

Gov. Murphy indicated he believed the conferences would help pave the way toward a settlement. In discussing the probability of early peace, he said:

"Unlike the General Motors conferences, we (Murphy, Chrysler and Lewis) will not be breaking Virgin ground."

ENDED GM STRIKE

The Governor has been hoping for such a meeting since he cut short his vacation in Florida and hurried back to Michigan when the Chrysler strike got under way a fortnight ago.

He had gone to Florida for a rest from his strenuous work in bringing about a settlement in the recent 44-day General Motors strike.

Lewis, at Murphy's request, came to Detroit in February to sit in at the General Motors conference. So tomorrow will be the CIO leader's second trip to Michigan since the epidemic of strikes hit the automobile industry, December 30, the day before Murphy was inaugurated Governor.

The projected Murphy-Chrysler-Lewis conference, with its strong possibilities of leading to peace, lessened the tension that had been growing in Detroit as a result of sit-down situation.

BIG STRIKE RALLY TONIGHT

All talk of Homer Martin, president of UAW, calling a general strike of automobile workers in the city suddenly ceased and the great mass meeting of between 100,000 and 200,000 unionists and their sympathizers called for Cadillac square this evening, lost most of its dangerous aspect.

The common council today voted four to one to allow the United Automobile workers to hold their mass meeting this evening under police supervision. Yesterday they turned down the union's request for a permit.

Martin, UAW president, and Richard Frankenstein, organizer, will be among the speakers.

Possibility of a general strike seemed remote in view of the assurance of Mayor Frank Couzens that there would be no interference with "peaceful sit-downs." Only sit-downs instigated by outsiders would be raided, he said.

Police Superintendent Frahm said his men had investigated ten strikes and found they had been called without "outside interference." He said police would not evict these strikers. His list included:

General Cigar Co., 40 women sit-downers.

Essex Cigar Company, 38 women.

Two plants of Hudson Motor Car Company, 1350 men and women.

Plymouth Motor Car Company, 1000 men and women.

De Soto Motors, 300 men and women.

Yale & Towne Manufacturing Company, 80 men and women.

Square D. Electrical Company, 200 men and women.

Bohn Aluminum & Brass Company, plants closed but not held by sit-downers.

9 SHIPS IN RACE TO SAVE BOAT

The liner Paris of the French line, the latest vessel to join the perilous search, also reported confusion over the "MO" bearing signal of the Bjerkli.

According to the message from the Hamburg, the bearing received from the Norwegian steamer could either be interpreted that the liner was either 132 degrees on one side of the Bjerkli or 312 degrees.

TWO HOURS AWAY

At 11:30 a. m. a message picked up from the City of Havre, which had previously reported being 100 miles away, stated that it believed it was "two hours sailing distance away."

Details from the stricken ship were meagre and the reports, in jerky, broken code, reported she was taking water fast.

At 6:28 a. m., an amateur operator at the key of the wireless set on the Bjerkli advised listeners the vessel was "low in the water" and still waiting assistance. Another dramatic message read:

"Please help us. Taking water. No bearing for two days."

HAMBURG NEAREST

The Hamburg was the nearest ship to the Bjerkli and at 11:22 o'clock last night advised the Bjerkli:

"We are near you now. Fire blue lights and rockets."

At her last port of call, Norfolk, Va., the Bjerkli had labor trouble and the captain discharged seven men for insubordination and hired five new crew members. Others of the crew were reported rebellious over long working hours, but had agreed to stay with the ship until she returned to Norway.

The Chelan reported that nothing but crisp staccato flashes of undecipherable dots and dashes came from the Bjerkli's radio and gave further evidence that the ship's radio was without an operator and that the reports were apparently being sent by an amateur.

The coast guard vessel was using these dots and dashes as an improvised "radio beam" attempting to follow the line of loudest frequency in an effort to reach the stricken vessel's side.

OTHERS IN SEARCH

Other vessels engaged in search were London Exchange, less than 100 miles away; the City of Auckland, which first picked up the distress signals, reported approximately 50 miles away; an American tramp steamer, the Black Osprey, 90 miles away, and the Pennland, somewhere between 50 and 100 miles from the reported position of the Bjerkli.

The Bjerkli is 235 feet long and was built in 1899. She makes call stops at various ports throughout the world. The home port of the vessel is listed as Bodo, Norway.

4 Overcome During Roxbury Blaze, 6 Rescued

Six persons trapped on the second and third floors were rescued and four firemen were overcome today when a two- alarm fire swept a three-story wooden tenement at 44 Warren street, Roxbury.

When apparatus arrived the flames had reached the upper floors. Six persons had already reached the street in their night-clothing but six others were still sleeping.

Sergeants Harold Hickey and Thomas Conboy of the Dudley street station broke open the door leading to the tenement stairway and aroused the occupants.

They carried down Elizabeth Dowd, 71, an invalid, from the third floor. They then rescued Mrs. Annie Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Joslyn, Mrs. Della Comican, 52, and her son, Joseph, 32.

Four firemen were overcome when they went into the basement to fight the source of the fire, undetermined. Their gas masks fell off and they inhaled smoke and gases.

They were all rushed to City Hospital for treatment. The firemen are Ray Conners, Jack Devine, William Kelley and Robert McGonagle. Conners and Devine were said to be in a serious condition from smoke inhalation at the hospital.

An Angora cat in the tenement was overcome by smoke and taken to the Animal Rescue League and revived. Damage was estimated at $5000.

UNION SETBACK SEEN AS STORE STRIKE ENDS

By JAMES F. DOOLING
(Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent)

Providence, March 23—Business leaders in this state today saw in the speedy settlement of the Retail Stores' Employes' strike a definite setback for the Committee for Industrial Organization in New England.

Both sides in this shutdown, which caused closings of nearly four score stores in the downtown district, were forced to concede points in their platforms.

The CIO, however, it was pointed out by representatives of the employers group, had failed in two of its main objectives.

10 PER CENT INCREASE

One was the recognition of the CIO affiliate union to be "sole collective bargaining agency" for workers.

The other, that strikers did not succeed in gaining the flat 10 per cent increase in general wages which they demanded.

On the other hand, the strikers forced through their 10 per cent pay increase for those making less than $15 a week.

But they contented themselves with a 7½ per cent jump in pay for employes making from $15 to $20 weekly, and a 5 per cent raise for those earning between $20 and $30 a week.

Industrial unionites triumphed further in achieving citywide—probably statewide—recognition of these pay scales for all employes of stores, large and small.

But, for all that nearly 7000 workers were forced out of their jobs during the Saturday-Monday "holiday," and that store owners lost an appreciable amount of Easter week business, the employers' group was satisfied to sacrifice what was estimated as about $25,000 in wages.

The reason they were satisfied was that they were not compelled to recognize the CIO as any more than a bargaining agency for workers the industrial unionites actually represent.

REVIVE A. F. OF L.

It was freely reported, furthermore, that the American Federation of Labor affiliate—the Retail Sales Clerks' charter—would be revived.

That may make for an acid test of the respective strengths of the two national labor organizations in this state. Workers were not sure, but employers would like to know.

The agreement between merchants and CIO delegates was reached in the State House shortly after midnight.

The agreement will be filed with the director of the Division of Labor, Thomas F. McMahon, when completed. It is almost similar to the one which was rejected by the CIO on Sunday night. Terms are as follows:

A 42½-hour week for employes of large stores, and 48 hours for the smaller shops.

Two weeks vacation for workers employed more than one year, and a week's vacation for those employed for six months.

Mayor's Challenge

Mayor Mansfield today challenged the Municipal Research Bureau to show how and where the city can save or obtain the $5,000,000 suggested by the bureau as available without borrowing.

EVERETT SHOE STRIKE ENDS

Approximately 375 employes of the Albro Shoe Co., 210 Broadway, Everett, who walked out in a mass demonstration yesterday, will return to work tomorrow, it was determined today as union representatives signed an agreement with company officials at noon today to terminate the strike.

The workers get a 15 per cent wage increase, effective retroactively as of March 13 and lasting until May 8.

The agreement also grants recognition of the United Shoe Workers of America, an affiliate of the CIO.

At Malden, where a minority group of the workers of the Lorraine Shoe Co. have been on strike, the factory was declared closed today for a week, throwing 250 men and women out of employment.

'TIP-OFF' POOL MAN GUILTY

A South End number pool "tip-off" man, whose "system" has been an obstacle to the special raiding squad of Station 4 for some time, was brought into court today after Special Officer Barney Fay, attached to Sergeant William H. Foley's raiding squad, resorted to strategy.

For some time, police of the Warren avenue station have been watching the activities of Levi H. Thompson, Albion street, South End.

Today they charged from both ends of a street where they sighted him.

Thompson doged into the kitchen.

As the police entered, a woman, who had been washing in the basement, threw a basket of tickets into the furnace.

Officer Fay grasped one of the washing tubs, throwing the water into the furnace.

An explosion resulted, which sent the officers scrambling for the door to escape the steam, but also blew charred bits of the number pool slips out on the floor.

These were enough evidence for Judge Joseph Riley to give Thompson a one-month suspended sentence in Municipal Court today.

Suspend Sentence In License Fraud

For driving with Rhode Island license plates, avoiding Massachusetts automobile insurance laws and operating a vehicle not duly registered, Jacob London, 47, of Jones rd., Revere, was given a suspended sentence of six months in House of Correction and $25 suspended fine by Judge Paul J. McDonald in Chelsea District Court today.

According to Chelsea Officer Zartarian of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, London was arrested in Chelsea while driving a junk truck with Rhode Island plates.

Diver Caught In Mid-Air As He Dares Death

DOWN, DOWN——

Life in a wheelchair—if he lives—will be the price paid by Stunt-man Ray Woods for an unauthorized 186-foot plunge from the San Francisco-Oakland bridge. He sustained a broken back when he struck the water.

DIVES 186 Feet Off BRIDGE

FAME-SEEKER BREAKS BACK

San Francisco, March 23 (AP)—The dubious distinction of outdoing Steve Brodie by diving 186 feet from the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge was held by Ray Woods today—at the cost of a broken back.

He probably will have to live in a wheel chair the rest of his life, partly paralyzed, physicians said. That is, if he lives.

Of his leap, 51 feet more than Brodie's purported 135-foot plunge off Brooklyn bridge to fame and fortune in 1886, the 30-year-old St. Louis professional diver recalled today:

"I stepped off backward and counted four. Then I bent double and grabbed my left thumb with my right hand.

"I came out of the jack-knife, I held my hands over my head to break the impact of the water.

"That is all I remembered. I must have hit the water with terrific impact."

Hopping off a truck that carried him onto the bridge, Woods climbed over the side, threw off a robe revealing him in padded bathing suit and football helmet, shouted "Is everything O. K.?" to a boat below, and leaped.

Fame's Reward

Woods, who asserted he performed the feat purely for publicity and with no chance of immediate financial gain, jumped feet first from the lower deck of the span yesterday. As he fell he was whipped by a strong wind and struck the water with a loud splash.

He was pulled out unconscious by helpers.

In the boat rode his wife, Mrs. Bernice Woods, and his mother, Mrs. E. M. Woods. Both said they had seen him leap 184 times off bridges from the Brooklyn bridge to the Aurora bridge in Seattle.

Told her husband would be a cripple if he lives, his wife said:

"All we ask is that he lives. If he does we'll get along somehow."

France, Italy Row Over 'Love Diary'

By WILLIAM P. REED

Paris, March 23 (US)—Serious international complications threaten to develop here as a result of tempestuous Madeleine de Fontagne's exotic allegations concerning Premier Mussolini of Italy.

It is expected that Italy's representatives here will lodge a second protest with the French government after having already made stern representations, Universal Service has learned.

Madame DeFontagne, the 29-year-old divorcee, told a court magistrate here that she shot and wounded Count Charles De Chambrun because she was convinced he caused her to "lose the love" of Il Duce.

The brunette French newspaper woman testified at a secret preliminary hearing that she carried on an alleged romance with "my Benito" in Rome for more than three months—until the Italian dictator abruptly refused to see her any more.

"BLINDED WITH ANGER"

Held on charges of assault with intent to kill, Madame De Fontagne declared her discovery of a memorandum referring to her and Mussolini in Count De Chambrun's office at Rome blinded her with anger and led her to attempt suicide.

Last Wednesday, she testified, she determined to seek revenge on Count De Chambrun for having "betrayed" her purported love for Il Duce which she had confided to the count while he was French ambassador to Italy. After relating how Mussolini allegedly refused to see her, Madame Fontagne said:

"I was determined to find the reason why. I discovered a dossier (memorandum) of De Chambrun which said I boasted of being the Duce's sweetheart.

"I was convinced it was De Chambrun's fault that I lost Mussolini's love and so I tried suicide."

The long distance telephone wires between Paris and Rome were choked with diplomatic calls as Mussolini's emissaries here sought instructions from the Italian government and, in turn, reported the sensational developments in the "cause celebre."

Telephone lines also buzzed between Paris and Geneva where Madame De Fontagne reportedly often helped some of Europe's outstanding diplomats while away evening hours in pleasurable pursuits after League of Nations sessions.

Strenuous efforts were understood to be in progress to prevent the case from involving the names of other prominent personages.

OFFICIAL LOSES JOB

It was rumored, meanwhile, that Dino Alfieri, high Fascist press official in Rome, may be transferred to another post because his name was mentioned by Madame de Fontagne in her diary, in numerous letters and in her testimony when she said she sought Alfieri's aid after Mussolini had allegedly "jilted" her.

Madame de Fontagne recounted in great detail at the private hearing the story of the "great romance" she claims to have had with Mussolini, it was learned.

At the close of the session the court ordered her to submit to a mental examination to determine her sanity.

4-ALARM FIRE SWEEPS SHIP

the drydocks the flames spread to the foredeck and pilot house of the steamer San Gil and then ate below decks.

More than 200 workmen on this boat scrambled to safety, C. H. Ingalls of Providence, an engineer, barely making his way up from the lower hold in time to escape being cut off by smoke and flame.

In the other drydock, at the opposite side of the middle pier was the San Bruno, but this vessel escaped.

The Halo had been pulled out of drydock to allow the San Bruno in this morning and was moored to an adjoining dock, and the Evangeline was also tied up nearby. These vessels were saved by a shift in the wind.

The first alarm sounded for the fire was quickly followed by the other three, bringing fireboats to the battle and apparatus from all northern sections of the city, as well as downtown stations. Chelsea apparatus came in to cover for Boston also.

TAXI POLICE TO SCENE

Extra police were rushed into the area from Charlestown, South Boston and downtown divisions, radio calls being sent out to cruiser cars to pick up all patrolmen sighted on the streets and taxi them to the fire zone.

Firemen believe the blaze to have been started either by a spark or a carelessly discarded match or cigarette falling to the oil-wet pier.

The fire started while firemen were already battling a two-alarm blaze in a three-apartment wooden dwelling house in Bennington street.

This fire caused a loss of $5000 and drove out three families, among those forced out being a woman taken from a sick bed.

3 SONS Get Thomson ESTATE

INVENTOR'S WILL FILED

Making no mention of his widow, the will of Dr. Elihu Thomson, noted scientist, electrical inventor and a personal friend of the late Thomas A. Edison, was filed for probate in Salem Probate Court today.

The will, one of the briefest ever filed in the Salem court, left the entire estate to be shared equally by three sons, Malcolm of Swampscott, Roland of Schenectady, N. Y., and Donald T. of Rye, N. Y. Mrs. Thomson, the former Clarrisa Hovey of Boston, was at his bedside when he died at his Swampscott home last week.

No estimate of the value of the estate was recorded.

The document named the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Co. as executors.

Dr. Thomson specified that all inheritance taxes and other assessments against the estate should be paid out of a special trust fund, already created, and that all sales of property by the executors should be final.

Text of the will reads:

"Having already made disposition of substantially all my property, I give my property both real and personal to be shared by my children living at my death, intentionally making no provision for my grandchildren."

Two grandchildren omitted in the will are Elihu C. Thomson and Joan Thomson of Newton, both minors. They are children of the late Stewart Thomson, a son of the scientist. They are under the guardianship of the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston.

Girls' Latin School Drinking Water Checked, O. K.

Three city branches were thrown into an uproar today by the tale of one imaginative school girl who told her parents she was made ill last week by drinking water at the Girls' Latin school on Huntington avenue, where she is a student.

She repeated the story when she went to school Monday, telling classmates they were drinking contaminated water. Hysteria swept the school as several other girls agreed with her, and began to spread the rumor.

As a result, three investigations were made this morning.

Arthur L. Gould, superintendent of the school, took samples of the water for analysis, as did Daniel L. Sullivan, division engineer for the municipal water department, and Dr. Frederick J. Bailey, deputy health commissioner of the Municipal Health Department in charge of communicable diseases.

All three declared there is nothing wrong with the water.

"It is the same water as all other persons on the municipal water system drink," Sullivan stated.

The school girls themselves took samples, however, to conduct an investigation of their own.

Sea Yields Body Of Actor Vosper

London, March 23 (US) — The body of Frank Vosper, British actor-playwright, who mysteriously disappeared from the French liner Paris March 6, has washed ashore near Eastbourne, according to the Daily Express.

On his way from Hollywood to England, Vosper either jumped or fell from the ship following a champagne party in the apartment of Miss Muriel Oxford, British beauty, as the ship neared Plymouth.

New York, March 23 (US) — Taking wings from the roof of a three-story Bronx building a heavy "magic carpet" blew over the parapet to the street below and crushed a 24-year-old woman to the ground.

FAMED Sculptor DIES

MACMONNIES NUDES NOTED

New York, March 23 (AP)—Frederick MacMonnies, 73, one of the world's most successful modern sculptors, died of pneumonia in Doctors' Hospital last night after an illness of a few days.

Among the greatest of the MacMonnies works are the great Marne battle monument at Meaux, France, the Washington group at Princeton, N. J.; the Nathan Hale statue in City Hall Park, New York, and the colossal fountain of the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893 in Chicago.

His "Bacchante With Infant Faun," made in 1894, was done in France and the French government tried to buy it, but was outbid by Charles F. McKim, New York architect, who presented it to the Boston public library.

The library trustees, however, decided its figures were too nude, so McKim gave it to the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York.

THE BRIGHTER SIDE

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

We are inclined to think that the smartest liquor dealers in these United States are located in the state of Florida.

They are the smartest because they are the only liquor dealers we know of who frankly recognize that a return to national prohibition is not as daffy an idea as some other liquor dealers like to think.

Damon Runyon

It was in Florida that the Anti-Saloon League held its last convention, and it may be that the Florida liquor dealers were quicker to catch the vibrations given off by this gathering, because they were closer to it. The folks on the Florida peninsula are quite sensitive to vibrations.

In any event, the Florida liquor dealers are holding a meeting in Jacksonville at this time, devising ways and means of beating the prohibitionists to any punch they may let fly.

The Florida liquor dealers are preparing recommendations for amendments to the Florida liquor law, which was passed two years ago.

In these two years, it seems that the Florida liquor dealers discovered that their business can stand a little sprucing up in many respects. They discovered certain evils that they wish eliminated, lest they furnish hand-holds for the prohibitionists some day in the future.

Chief Menace

Those liquor dealers who think the idea of a return to national prohibition is a daffy idea are perhaps the dealers who sell liquor to juveniles, which the Florida liquor dealers say is one of the very worst menaces to the business.

It seems that much of the increasing juvenile delinquency of the past few years has been traced by students of that sort of thing to over-indulgence in booze by the kids.

It is only fair to say, we think, that the average liquor dealer is not likely to sell liquor to a minor. But it appears there are enough dealers who have no compunctions on this score to make juvenile indulgence a problem that seriously disturbs the Florida liquor dealers.

Then there is the drunken automobile driver, who leaves his dead strewn along the thoroughfares from coast to coast. The motor fatalities due to drunkenness increase almost daily. The Florida liquor dealers think it has become menace No. 1 to the liquor business in this country.

We do not know what remedy the Florida liquor dealers have for the drunken driver. Though we understand they think greater discretion in selling liquor would help. We feel that a meat-axe would be more efficacious, but we do not care to butt into the liquor dealers' gathering with any suggestions.

Trying Cleanup

A reduction of the alcoholic content of beer and wine to 3.2 per cent by volume, greater police powers for the state inspectors, and strict control over the beer parlors of Florida are said to be other recommendations that will be offered by the dealers. A beer parlor is the Florida term for the same thing they call a beer joint in Brooklyn.

The Florida liquor dealers want to expunge any places where today kids are permitted to buy intoxicants. We hear, too, that revocation of license of any dealer who sells liquor to an automobile driver already showing the influence of liquor may be recommended.

In short, the Florida liquor dealers feel that the time has come for them to clean up their own business, before the business gets cleaned out again.

The other liquor dealers of the United States might well grab a few pages from the Florida book. The business is sitting pretty now, all right, but it is showing a tendency to sag in spots. It can easily drift back to the condition that it was in when it was knocked on the head.

The old-time saloon keepers were a dumb lot. They permitted their business to become slipshod and foul. They never made any combined effort to get it straightened out. The open saloon became a breeding spot for evil, an eyesore in every community. It was a pushover for the white-ribboners when they finally gave a good, big push.

Laughed at Advice

It is conceivable that if the saloon keepers had joined together and cleaned up and regulated their business, prohibition would have been greatly modified, if not staved off entirely.

But the old time saloon keepers laughed at the suggestion that they might be completely expunged by nation-wide prohibition. They never lifted a finger to help their own racket, as far as trying to make it more respectable was concerned.

The brewers were not any too bright in those pre-prohibition days, either. The brewers did not care to become allied in any way with the whiskey traffic, deeming themselves a hitch above the whiskey folks.

The brewers knew, too, that it was whiskey that the Prohibitionists were aiming at, and they wanted to keep out of the range of any stray bullets. They got caught in the stitches eventually. When the Prohibitionists started in cracking heads, they reached over and knocked off the brewers, as well as the whiskey people.

Had the brewers and hard liquor people stuck together and presented a united front, the Prohibitionists might have had a tougher time. We do not know how beer and booze regard each other now, since they are both respectable, and have something more or less in common.

One thing about beer, no brewer has ever been able to make it as bad as some of the whiskey that is sneaking into the market nowadays. A fellow we know used some of this bad whiskey by mistake for a shampoo the other day. It did not remove the hair. It rusted it.

Child Labor Bill Faces New Debate

Debate and legislative action on the petition of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor for ratification of the child labor amendment to the Federal Constitution will provide the highlight of today's activity on Beacon Hill.

The adverse report of the committee on constitutional law is on the House of Representatives calendar today for acceptance. The committee reported 9-2 against the petition of the Federation of Labor.

Representatives Charles E. Morrill of Haverhill and Charles Miller of Boston are the two dissenters to the committee report.

Hunger Strikers Found Well Fed

Katowice, Poland, March 23 (AP) —One thousand well-fed "hunger" strikers barricaded themselves underground today at the American financed Giesche mine, demanding higher pay and shorter hours as part of their 10 conditions.

Although a black flag, denoting a hunger strike, flew from the main shaft, doctors who examined 45 strikers hoisted to the surface by their self-entombed comrades, declared not one was suffering from hunger, but all had collapsed from lack of oxygen.

Mountain Neighbor Of Child Bride Also Marries

Sneedville, Tenn., March 23 (AP) —Young East Tennessee mountain girls apparently are set on proving "love will find a way" regardless of lawmakers.

The January marriage of nine-year-old Eunice Winstead to Charlie Johns, 23, stirred wide criticism of Tennessee laws and brought a new statute setting 16 as the marriage age minimum, but that didn't prevent the wedding of 14-year-old Dollie Livesay, mountain neighbor of Eunice.

It was learned today that Dollie and James Brewer, handsome, 23-year-old hillside farmer, were married a week ago in Middlesboro, Ky, the state line being less than 10 miles from the isolated homes of the Livesays and the Winsteads.

The bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dook Livesay of Treadway, have decided to folow the example of Eunice's parents and "let the children make the best of it."

They already have set up housekeeping, but James hasn't been to see his mother and father-in-law yet.

Jailed for Having Stolen U. S. Bond

George A. Miller of Chicago was sentenced to two years in a penitentiary in federal court today after he pleaded guilty to charges of possessing and altering a $5000 gold government bond.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. B. Cartier, the bond was part of a $1,000,000 loot taken in a New York bank holdup.

70 BOSTON TEACHERS FACE QUIZ ON 'MR. X'

Nearly 70 Boston public school women teachers, who were lured into the "get-rich-quick" scheme of John Neville, alias John Bruce Heath, with promises of exorbitant profits on their meagre investments, were to appear at the office of Attorney-General Dever today and tell all they know of its operations.

In a surprise move, Attorney-General Dever ordered the teachers to come to his office and give first-hand accounts of their dealings with the Bainton Associates, named after Miss Cecelia Bainton, Boston public school music teacher, aunt of Neville's wife and innocent "dupe" of his scheme.

Miss Bainton fainted yesterday when she appeared before Dever and laid the full blame for the alleged swindle on Neville's shoulders. In municipal court Neville was held in $20,000 for the April session of Superior Court.

25 PER CENT MONTHLY

The school teachers are alleged to have gathered in the Beacon Hill house of the Bainton Associates and heard enticing propositions of quick wealth through the investments of mysterious "Mr. X," now known as Neville, which would net them as high as 25 per cent profit per month.

Neville has since confessed the $80,000 he took from Boston investors, half of them school teachers, was poured into operation of his Wall street, New York, publication, the Financial Observer, now suspended.

The roundup of school teachers caused a sensation in school circles, where it was felt the investigation into the Ponzi-like scheme would go no farther than the leading figures. Officials refused to say whether they planned indictments against others in connection with the scheme, but it was known Dever does plan to press 137 complaints against Neville before the Suffolk grand jury.

OTHER WITNESSES

It is expected also that members of the Oxford Movement in Boston will be called to tell Dever how they were approached to invest money in Neville's proposition.

It was learned at the attorney-general's office that Neville had engaged in another partnership plan similar to the Bainton Associates before he met Miss Bainton and it was thought there would be an investigation into this scheme along with the present investigation.

Police of Toronto, New York, Chicago and London were said to be making inquiries about Neville's operations in Boston. Scotland Yard is interested in his appearance in London in 1935 with a 20-year-old girl, who posed as his wife when they lived in a swanky apartment.

Immigration authorities are also investigating Neville's story of slipping back to the United States after his deportation to Canada two years ago.

Neville yesterday was given financial aid by Roy Irving Bull of Baltimore, Md., a cousin of his wife's, who made the stipulation that he accept the money only on the condition he "goes straight" in the future. Neville promised.

G-Men Join Probe Of Threats on Mrs. Spreckels

Los Angeles, March 23 (US)—Federal forces were flung into investigation of kidnaping threats against the 2-year-old daughter of wealthy John Detrick Spreckels III.

First alarm was felt by the child's mother, Mrs. Roxana Spreckels, divorced wife of the wealthy sportsman and scion of the California sugar family, when she and the child were shadowed on two occasions. She has retained a private guard.

Conferences were held today between Mrs. Spreckels' attorney, S. S. Hahn, and John Hansen of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Later the distraught mother was to tell the federal agent of the suspicious actions of the trio who followed her and the child, and of a series of sinister telephone calls.

Unaware of the consternation over her welfare, chubby little Elsie La Marr played about her home today as six burly private detectives patrolled the neighborhood.

Mrs. Spreckels recently brought court action to force her wealthy husband to increase her monthly allowance from $100 to $300.

GUNMEN FLEE WITH $50 IN CASH BOX

At least one Stoneham man, familiar with the victim's household, was sought today as a member of a bandit gang which robbed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Poole, in Bow street, Stoneham, brutally beating a 75-year-old man and dragging a 21-year-old girl upstairs by her hair.

The gunmen escaped with between $50 and $60, taken from a cash box in Mrs. Poole's bedroom.

Victim of the beating was Isaac Dudley, Mrs. Poole's father. He attempted to interfere when he saw two armed and masked bandits manhandling Miss Helen Grace Perry, 21, who was taking care of Mr. and Mrs. Poole's four small children.

One of the robbers struck Dudley over the head with a gun butt, knocking him stunned and bleeding to the floor of the Poole kitchen.

DRAGGED BY HAIR

Meantime the other robber, gripping Miss Perry by the hair, dragged her upstairs and started hunting for money.

Having looted the cash box in Mrs. Poole's bedroom, the upstairs robber shouted to his pal on the floor below:

"Hey, Joe! There was supposed to be a big haul here, but I've only found $50."

As the disgruntled bandits then began a systematic ransacking of the house, seeking more money, Dudley recovered partially from effects of his beating and staggered down cellar.

FLEE IN AUTO

The bandits, meantime, had fled in an automobile. Dudley and the little Poole girl said a third bandit, masked and armed like the two who entered the house, was standing guard outside.

Police thought it possible a fourth man was at the wheel of the waiting auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Poole were not at home, at the time of the robbery. They had left the house by automobile, just an hour previously.

In support of their theory that at least one Stoneham man was a member of the bandit gang, police cited Miss Perry's story.

She said she answered a knock on the door.

CALLED BY FIRST NAME

A voice called her by her first name, saying:

"Let us in, Helen, it's all right. We want to see Charley" (Mr. Poole).

She opened the door, and in strode the two bandits, handkerchiefs over their faces and revolvers in their hands. They hustled her to the kitchen, where the fracas with Dudley took place.

Youngest of the Poole children Charles, two, was asleep in his crib. The other three, Barbara, 12, Louise, eight, and Jane, five, were playing in the cellar. All four were ignored by the bandits.

The four children were in the house when bandits entered, slugged their grandfather, Issac Dadley, 75, and dragged the girl by the hair upstairs to aid their search for loot. The bandits escaped with $50.

REBEL SAILORS FACE COURT

Liverpool, Eng., March 23 (AP)—Seventeen former members of the crew of the British freighter Linaria who refused to sail from Boston with a nitrates cargo for Spain, today, were accused of neglect of duty and wilful disobedience of lawful command.

They were served with summonses upon arrival from the United States aboard the S.S. Samaria and were directed to appear in police court Thursday.

The Linaria left Boston March 8 for Hopewell, Va., after being held in port for 10 days, 17 crew members refusing to transport nitrates to Spain on grounds they would be used by insurgents to make munitions.

'Flying Duchess,' 71, Missing on Air Hop

DUCHESS OF BEDFORD

London, March 23 (AP)—Emergency workers in the Fenlands turned from their struggle with a flood today to hunt for Britain's "Flying Duchess," the 71-year-old Duchess of Bedford, in the fear she had crashed.

It was believed she might have mistaken land covered with several feet of water for a smooth, dry landing place yesterday while flying solo from Woburn on what was intended as a short jaunt.

Airplanes searched the territory for a sign of her missing ship and police hunted Monks Woods, 13 miles from Petersborough where a gamekeeper said he saw a plane last night.

The Duke of Bedford spent the night directing searchers from his home. Friends said his fears for the safety of his wife, who made her first solo flight when she was 65, were mitigated by the Duchess' knowledge of the country.

The Duchess took off at 3:30 p. m. (10:30 a. m., E. S. T.) and she was expected to return two hours later after "a short trip around."

The titled aviatrix took up flying when she was 62 and has flown many thousands of miles. She has one child, the Marquess of Tavistock, heir to the Dukedom of Bedford.

$125,000 Glass Plant Fire

Fort Smith, Ark., March 23 (AP)—Fire early today destroyed the three-story Porter Mirror and Glass Company, manufacturers of plate glass, at a loss estimated by officials at $125,000.

$500 BURGLARY IN ATTLEBORO

Attleboro, March 23—Safecrackers, whose mode of entrance is a mystery, ripped open the safe in the Union Theater, Union and Dunham streets, early today, obtaining $500.

They left behind them about $50 in silver and $877 in checks.

Jimmy marks were found by police on nearly every window of the theater, but police failed to find which had been used for entrance. The yeggmen left the theater, however, by the stage door.

The theater was locked just before midnight and the robbery was discovered at 9 a. m. today by Joseph Williams, assistant manager.

California U. Honors Birthday

Berkeley, Cal., March 23 (US)—Throughout the world in general and on the Berkeley campus in particular, the University of California today will celebrate its 69th birthday.

Impressive charter day exercises are scheduled for this morning in the Hearst Greek Theatre. James Edward Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, D. C., will deliver the Charter Day address.

Prior to the exercises in Hearst Greek Theatre, a procession of high state and church dignitaries will form in Hearst Mining Circle, near the base of the Campanile, marching to the theater for the exercises.

Leading the procession will be Governor Frank F. Merriam, President Robert Gordon Sproule of the University of California, and Bishop Freeman followed by regents of the university, justices of the state Supreme Court and members of the faculty. Students and alumni of the university will assemble in the theater for exercises, scheduled to begin at 10:30 a. m.

The Right Reverend Charles A. Ramm of St. Mary's Cathedral of San Francisco, will give the invocation, to be followed by Bishop Freeman's address and the presentation of a number of honorary degrees by the university.

MOLEY BLASTS COURT PLAN AS RUINOUS, 'PIG-IN-POKE'

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, March 23—Raymond Moley, formerly one of President Roosevelt's close advisers, now a magazine editor, today assailed President Roosevelt's court plan as a "pig in the poke," which is likely to destroy Democratic institutions and obstruct progressive development in the future.

Testifying before the Senate judiciary committee, Moley challenged his one-time chief, the President, to propose a constitutional amendment to achieve his proposed economic and social reforms.

He said the President's proposal was splitting not only the Democratic party but the whole liberal movement.

NO REAL REMEDY

Terming the plan a "blind, intemperate change," Moley declared it would "perpetuate a basic wrong" and produce no permanent remedy for social ailments.

Moley, under cross-examination, suggested four broad constitutional amendments.

One would give the states greater power to regulate industry and agriculture, another would increase congressional power over interstate commerce, a third would limit the Supreme Court's power to declare legislation unconstitutional only by a two-thirds majority, and the fourth would call for compulsory retirement of judges at some age above 70.

Senator Logan (D) of Kentucky, chided Moley for preferring a series of constitutional amendments to the President's plan.

"I would rather amend, amend and amend than pack, pack and pack," said Moley.

Logan finally said: "I do not like this proposal at all. I have never liked it but I know of nothing better."

MOLEY OPTIMISTIC

"I do not share your pessimism about an amendment," said Moley. "If the President put his great prestige behind it, I think i twould be very easy to amend the Constitution."

Moley told Logan he believed the Constitution was "flexible" and that the Supreme Court had not recognized that "flexibility."

Senator Borah interposed with an objection.

"Take the AAA," said Borah. "The court held then that the production of agricultural products was wholly within the control of the states. That had been a rule of the court ever since John Marshall began rendering opinions.

"It would require a great flexibility to change an opinion laid down by the court for 100 years."

BORAH WARNS

"I believe the court could have recognized the changes that have taken place in agriculture since the start of our government," replied Moley. "But so long as they didn't, I believe the Constitution must be amended."

Borah warned that if the court gave to Congress the powers reserved to the States, "we will have an oligarchy here and the people will have lost control of their own government."

TIME RIPE FOR CHANGE

Moley declared:

"The time is ripe for a basic and fundamental restatement of the law to make possible the attainment of the humane objectives of progressive thought. I deeply regret to see that golden moment pass.

"We have, as the President stated, a rendezvous with destiny. Let us make democracy work by working through the instruments of democracy."

In urging one or more Constitutional amendments to meet current problems, Moley warned it would be more than a year before any benefits could be obtained under the President's plan. In the same length of time, he said, the Constitution could be amended if the President would only take the lead in that direction.

REAL PURPOSE OF PLAN

Moley admitted he had frequently criticised the Supreme Court for its decisions. He said the "original arguments" advanced for the President's plan "have been brushed aside by the logic of facts."

"It is frankly admitted now that the real purpose of the plan is to secure within the letter, though not within the spirit, of the Constitution, a court that will lift the cloud of doubt from a number of New Deal measures now in process of preliminary adjudication and to provide in advance for favorable action by the Supreme Court upon a number of measures not yet formulated."

Such a proposal, said Moley, is wholly inadequate to meet the present situation and is so destructive that it may obstruct progressive development in the future as well.

Moley's three major objections to the President's plan were:

"First, it is based upon emergency—or if you will, crisis—psychology. It is submitted as a make-shift, unsatisfactory panacea accompanied by apologies that a better solution is not possible.

"Second, it does not offer a permanent solution. It does not prevent the recurrence of exactly the same evil it is designed to remedy.

PROPOSAL INADEQUATE

"Third, I believe that this proposal is inadequate because it will still leave the Congress without specific powers it needs to regulate industry and agriculture in the public interest."

Pointing out that even if the President now names six new justices they, too, will grow old and permit a future President to name as many more.

Moley challenged the permanency of the President's plan. He asked whether Mr. Roosevelt's recent utterances meant there were "to be no more amendments to the Constitution" and "our constitutional destiny is to be vested in a long succession of reinvigorated courts."

"If we accept these inferences," Moley added, "then we are indeed abandoning the idea of a government of law, not men, of a written Constitution outlawing personal government, protecting minority rights and defining the limits of governmental power."

NEELY QUESTIONS

Senator Neely (D.) of West Virginia began the cross-examination of Moley. The witness agreed with Neely that the Supreme Court should "pay some attention to the elections."

Neely pressed the witness for a direct answer to the question:

"Do you believe the framers of the Constitution ever intended the Supreme Court should make laws?"

"No," replied Moley, "I don't believe the Supreme Court should make laws."

"Did the framers of the Constitution ever intend the Supreme Court should exercise legislative powers?"

"If you mean legislative power, in the sense the President exercises legislative power when he approves or vetoes legislation, my answer is yes."

FAVORS AMENDMENT

Moley said he believed the administration had attained most of its objectives.

"Why do you desire a constitutional amendment?" he was asked.

"I'd say most of the objectives have been achieved but some have not," said Moley. "But to do a complete job to achieve objectives set forth in legislation of the past, yes, we need a constitutional amendment."

Moley finally named four great principles he favored in constitutional amendments. These were:

"1. An amendment like Senator Borah's to free the states from danger of having their legislation held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

"2—An amendment extending the interstate powers of Congress, but I am not sure that's very popular.

RETIREMENT AGE

"3—I feel that after Congress and the President have approved a law there is a presumption of its constitutionality. I would favor an amendment fixing more than a mere majority of the Supreme Court to hold such acts unconstitutional. It might be 6 to 3, or 7 to 2.

"4—I would favor an amendment retiring justices at some fixed age—70, 72 or 75. I believe that would be wholesome."

Ex-Prison Dentist Requests Hearing

Dr. Joseph B. McDonald, State Prison dentist for seven years, who was discharged March 15 "for certain irregularities," today requested Warden Frank W. Lanagan for a public hearing.

The request was made by Attorney George McLaughlin on behalf of Dr. McDonald.

Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman later stated that, in any case, no public hearing would be held. He said Dr. McDonald would be allowed a private hearing.

Roosevelt Smiles, Won't Comment on Hughes Letter

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Warm Springs, Ga., March 23—President Roosevelt expressed hope today there would be no necessity for additional taxes at this session but he did not entirely close the door to that possibility.

Holding an informal press conference from the seat of his personally driven car, the President declined to go beyond the expression of that hope. He would not discuss the recent statement of Federal Reserve Board Governor Marriner S. Eccles that more taxes would be required.

SMILES OVER COURT

The Executive likewise had nothing to say about the growing seriousness of sit-down strikes. He said he was in touch with the situation through Washington.

Criticism of his Supreme Court plan by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes failed to evoke any response from Mr. Roosevelt. He merely smiled broadly and shook his head at questions.

It is known that the President still hopes to keep his budget within balance exclusive of public debt retirement.

TO LEAVE FRIDAY

Enactment of low-cost housing and farm tenancy legislation, plus other bills which Congress may evolve, may, however, make expenditures for the coming fiscal years about $150,000,000 over the President's January estimates.

It was understood the President is still hoping to keep relief expenditures within $1,500,000,000 but the recent floods make that figure problematical.

Mr. Roosevelt announced he would remain in Warm Springs until Friday, leaving that afternoon for Washington.

MAYOR TO PROBE MILK FUND PLAN

Mayor Mansfield today announced that he has begun inquiry into circumstances surrounding attempts to establish an incorporated milk fund in Boston.

The mayor made his announcement after an order that no city department heads lend his name to articles of incorporation for such a fund was questioned by reporters.

Earlier in the day City Councillor James E. Agnew, chairman of a milk fund committee created by the City Council more than a year ago had suggested to several charitable groups and suggested that their fund, which now has a treasury of more than $2000, be incorporated.

Agnew told his associates that he has protested to the state welfare department and to the state department of corporations against the granting of a charter for a fund to be known as the, "Boston Milk Fund," which came into existence on March 9, last, and which has headquarters at 6 Beacon street.

Foundation for a city sponsored milk fund for undernourished babies was laid by his committee and there is no need for the existence of the Beacon street group, Agnew said. Directors of the "Boston Milk Fund" are listed at the office of the City Clerk at City Hall as William A. Whelton, 26 Arborview rd., Jamaica Plain; Joseph Rosenberg, 37 Allen st., West End, and Miss Mary A. Ressigue of 158 West Newton st., South End.

Miss Ressigue is also listed as one of the owners of the Boston City News which, according to the records of the City Clerk, came into evidence as a weekly paper on March 16, last.

Agnew stated that the first issue of its publication proclaimed that its purpose was to promote plans for a milk fund for the children of the city.

"It is to keep private groups from incorporating as a Boston milk fund without the sanction of city officials that I suggested that the group appointed by the mayor become an incorporated fund. Since the mayor is of the opinion that city department heads should not be incorporators our fund will probably be incorporated with representatives of the Jewish, Roman Catholic, and Protestant charities as directors," Councillor Agnew said.

Washington, March 23 (AP)—Georgetown University reported today a seismograph recording of a moderately intense earthquake, centered 5200 miles from Washington—probably to the south.

PROBE SCHOOLS TO AVERT NEW GAS BLASTS

New London, Tex., March 23 (AP)—Rigid inspection of every rural school in the vast East Texas oil field area was the expected aftermath today of the disastrous London school explosion—caused, experts agreed, by accumulated gas.

School doors were shut as safety experts began a search for possible similar conditions that killed 455 here.

Extreme caution pervaded the area, especially after Gordon C. Hawley, chief engineer of the state's fire insurance department, told a military court of inquiry yesterday he had located another school in the vicinity endangered by escaping gas.

WARNS OF DANGER

"A test a few hours ago," Hawley told the investigators, "at the Carlisle school, near here, showed gas was escaping underneath the place at the rate of 720 cubic feet a day, all of which makes this occasion all the more omnipotent."

Dr. E. P. Schoch, Texas University authority on explosions, said all signs pointed to an accumulation of gas under the basement floor as the cause of the London tragedy.

Other witnesses testified that school officials switched from use of a commercial gas to a free supply, obtained by piping into the residue line of an oil company last January. Gas radiators heated the school.

FINDING NOT REVEALED

The military board did not make public an opinion on its findings and will not do so unless specifically requested by Governor James V. Allred.

Hawley said, "this tragedy would not have happened if certain regulatory measures had been taken."

He urged legislation that would include a state electric law, a state boiler safety code, a state exit code and other general safety measures.

Marital law was lifted as Dr. Schoch concluded his lengthy opinion and the court adjourned.

Red Cross Sets Blast Death Toll at 455

Overton, Tex., March 23 (AP)—American Red Cross officials announced today their casualty list for the London school disaster showed 455 dead, 53 injured and 49 still confined to hospitals.

Miss Ann McMechen, St. Louis, disaster relief representative, said the death total of 455 was subject to final revisions.

Discussion of proposed changes in the Massachusetts unemployment compensation law was scheduled at the State House today before a joint legislative committee on labor and industries.

VATICAN PACT CRISIS ACUTE IN BERLIN

By PIERRE J. HUSS
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, March 23—The Nazi-Vatican crisis mounted hourly today with revelation German secret police raided the chancellory of Count Von Preysing, Catholic Bishop of Berlin, seizing copies of Pope Pius' encyclical accusing Germany of violating the concordat with the Holy See.

At the same time, Chancellor Hitler perused the final draft of a blunt protest against the Papal accusations, and official quarters hinted the Reichsfuehrer may nullify the concordat, which was signed in 1933.

A Nazi counter-blast was expected following a late conference between Reich Church Minister Hans Kerrl and high officials of the ministry of interior. They drafted recommendations, which were telegraphed to Hitler at his Berchesgaden retreat, and it was believed he might act today.

RAP CATHOLIC LEADERS

Germany took up the gauntlet of verbal warfare, accusing Catholic leaders of instigating "calumnies against the Third Reich" and of attempting to destroy the domestic peace of Germany through pastoral letters and sermons.

Catholics also were charged with having provided material to foreign nations for antiGerman agitation.

Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, hinted broadly the concordat might be denounced. The propaganda ministry, however, denied any such intentions.

An authoritative statement issued on behalf of the German government bitterly attacked the Pope for the encyclical and flatly accused the Holy See of "direct intereference in German affairs."

It added the present activities of Catholic priests in Germany "created an unbearable situation."

SCORE PULPIT DELIVERY

"The Pope's encyclical," said the statement, "was read from all Catholic pulpits of the Catholic church of Germany and caused surprise and serious regret in German political circles.

"Neither pulpits nor foreign press are considered here proper places from which criticism regarding adherence to a treaty concluded by the Reich should belaunched by any partner to this treaty.

"It is the general opinion the form of discussion chosen by the Holy See does not convey the intention of engaging in a peaceful exchange of views, but amounts to direct interference in German affairs.

"The question seriously arises whether Vatican circles have not already become tired of the concordat concluded with the Reich, and think it advisable, therefore, to unload responsibility for possible failure of the concordat on the German partner to this treaty."

Hoy, Curley Aide, Sued for Divorce

Edmond J. Hoy, former secretary to ex-Governor James M. Curley, is being sued for divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment.

The action against Hoy, now clerk of the municipal court for civil business, was filed February 15 with Register of Probate Arthur W. Sullivan, but did not come to light until today.

In the action Hoy, who succeeded Richard "Dick" Grant as gubernatorial secretary in November, 1935, is charged with acts of cruelty between last July 1 and January 21 of this year.

The Hoy home is listed in Ward street, Newton Center, where Mrs. Hoy resides with the two children, Edmond, Jr., who will be seven next April 27, and James Evans Hoy, who will be six next July 2.

In the divorce action, Mrs. Hoy cites that she was married in Cambridge on June 20, 1929. Thereafter the couple lived in Brighton and Newton.

Mrs. Hoy is the former Vivian Irene Evans, who lived at one time in Simpson avenue, Somerville.

METHUEN DOG TRACK FACES STIFF FIGHT

Methuen, March 23—Strong opposition with a threat of a possible injunction to prevent the construction and operation of a dog racing track on the site of old Merrimack Park, a permit for which was granted last night by the board of selectmen, was registered today from several different sources.

Petition of the Greyhound Racing Association for a permit to erect an $80,000 dog track on the Lowell-Methuen boulevard was favored by the selectmen in a 2 to 1 vote.

Opposition to the track was being mobilized today by the Rev. James N. Seaver, president of the Methuen Christian League, which was foremost in a bitter battle to the granting of a similar permit to establish a dog racing track two years ago.

Rev. Seaver said today that his telephone had been ringing for hours as both parishioners and residents opposed to the entry of dog racing in the city called to register protest at the action of the selectmen.

The matter will be taken up before the Christian League, composed of the 12 Protestant ministers of the town, on Sunday, the Rev. Seaver said.

Franco Lines Up New Madrid Drive

The first authentic explanation from the Insurgent side of the setback suffered by General Francisco Franco in his fifth offensive against Madrid is given in the following uncensored dispatch by Karl H. Von Wiegand, dean of American war correspondents, who reveals Franco is about to launch a new drive.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

(Dean of American War Correspondents)

(World copyright, 1937, by Universal Service. Reproduction in whole or in part strictly prohibited.)

Salamanca, March 23 (US) (Uncensored dispatch by courier to the Franco-Spanish frontier)—General Francisco Franco's "in Madrid by Easter" spring offensive was launched northwest of Guadalajara on March 9 and came to a complete standstill within three days.

But the offensive is expected to be resumed this week. Preparations for the next "break through" battle have been completed by the Nationalist (insurgent) command. If the weather permits, tanks and other mechanized units are expected to play a decisive role in the impending hostilities.

GREAT DISAPPOINTMENT

On what sector this new blow by Franco to force capitulation of the "Red Verdun" is to be struck is, of course, a carefully guarded secret. The offensive, in fact, may be started in two or more sectors simultaneously.

The offensive to take Guadalajara, 32 miles northeast of Madrid and one of the Red militia's major bulwarks against completing the Nationalist ring around the capital, began two weeks ago with great expectations. It ended in even greater disappointment for the Whites (insurgents.)

For the second time within six weeks, the gods of rain, snow and tumultuous wind allied themselves with the Red loyalists to bring an important Nationalist operation to a halt.

It would almost seem that Franco's general staff—so far as he has one—failed to consult the weather charts.

Previously, the well-prepared offensive in the Jarama river valley southeast of Madrid literally became stuck in the mud. The wheels of heavy artillery carriages sank to their hubs. Tanks wallowed in a sea of mire like gigantic, frightened hippopotami.

This time in the Guadalajara offensive there were other and more serious contributing factors, such as lack of co-operation among Nationalist commanders which brought about the removal of Generals Orgaz and Varela, hitherto considered two of Franco's most expert and efficient military leaders.

ITALIANS AT FRONT

It was Jose Varela with his Moors who took Toledo last September and saved the intrepid Nationalist garrison in the Alcazar in the last hours of its historic resistance to the Red besiegers.

In the offensive launched northwest of Guadalajara a fortnight ago, the Italians, strongly mechanized and augmented by Foreign Legion divisions which had captured Malaga with so little resistance, formed the shock center of the Nationalist advance.

This Italian column, equipped with fully-motorized detachments and mechanized units with a variety of the latest military weapons, comprised a complete miniature army. It was said to have been under the command of the Italian General Rossi.

700 KILLED

The Italian center column moved along the excellent asphalted main highway leading to Guadalajara.

On the first day this column lost only 40 dead. But on the second day 200 of the Italians were killed, according to reports reaching Salamanca.

It is said that on the third day, when the red resistance suddenly became unexpectedly strong and when the nationalist offensive was stopped, the Italian column alone lost 700 dead, to say nothing of the casualties inflicted on the flank divisions.

The slippery soil, softened by a pouring rain, made it practically impossible for the Italians to deploy their tanks, armored cars and artillery to the right or left of the main road in order to ward off the flank onslaughts.

The red artillery, excellently directed by expert French and Russian officers, then got the range of the motorized units stalled on the highway and side roads close behind the vanguard shock troops. The red field guns wrought great havoc in the nationalist ranks.

Red Rain Mystifies Italian Riviera

Genoa, Italy, March 23 (AP)—Red rain mystified the residents of the Italian Riviera today and caused foreboding among the superstitious peasants.

Meteorologists explained the phenomenon was a result of clouds of red dust borne from the African desert by steady south winds of the past few days. The rain drops, they said, were colored as they fell through the swirling dust.

Mooney Pardon Resolve Pushed

Sacramento, Cal., March 23 (AP)—A second resolution asking Governor Frank Merriam to grant a pardon to Tom Mooney, convicted of the 1916 San Francisco preparedness day bombing, was reported favorably to the California assembly today by the rules committee.

Pointed Threats

Columbus, Miss., March 23 (AP)—If the favors escape at the Southern products dinner for commercial secretaries in Houston, Texas., the delegates will have good cause to remember this city.

Columbus sent live bees to be placed at each diner's plate.

NEW AIR RAIDS ON MADRID

Madrid, March 23 (INS)—Retaliating savagely for their defeats on the Guadalajara front, Spain's insurgent commanders sent their air force into action today, launching two fierce aerial drives on Madrid and the loyalist rear guard.

Both attacks, government authorities claimed, were fruitless and quickly repulsed.

Only Doctors Landed In Spain, Italy Reports

London, March 23 (AP)—Italy informed Great Britain today in reply to urgent queries concerning the reported landing of Italian troops in Spain that the contingent which disembarked at Cadiz, March 5, was made up only of volunteer doctors and nurses.

No Italian troops have landed in Spain, the reply stated flatly.

Spain Rebels Seize 30 Foreign Steamers

Lisbon, Portugal, March 23 (INS)—Spain's rebel fleet has seized 30 steamers of different nationalities carrying armaments since March 3, insurgent General Queipo De Llano declared today in a broadcast over the rebel radio network.

HOUSE SOUNDS ARMS WARNING TO NATION

Indianapolis, March 23 (AP)—Colonel E. M. House, adviser to the Wilson administration, in a signed article written for the April issue of the American Legion Monthly, declared "America can have peace if it is strong enough to command peace in the event of another great war."

Pointing out that in 1914 the nations of Europe "almost impatiently" awaited war, the diplomat who lives most of the time at Manchester, Mass., finds the situation today "even more threatening."

Colonel House said: "Had the United States possessed an armed force commensurate with our wealth, resources and population, prior to 1914, we might not only have avoided involvement in the conflict, but we might even have prevented the World War from taking place.

"So long as the world maintains gigantic military forces, the United States should have an army and navy strong enough to forbid any trespassing on her rights.

"I have the deepest sympathy for the program of the League of Nations for world disarmament, but until the world agrees to disarm, and the world shows signs of abiding by that agreement, then let the United States of America be so strong that she will have peace.

"Those of us who believe in a large army and navy, so long as other nations have them, see clearly that this is the only way to keep free from foreign disputes that do not concern us."

He warned that "today not only is Europe again arming to the teeth, but the great nations of Asia—Japan, China, India—are seething with warlike preparations. Again the United States, still feeling secure in her geographic position between two wide oceans, looks on—although not so uninterestedly as she did twenty-three years ago."

Davis' Daughter Bride Tomorrow

New York, March 23 (AP)—Miss Christine P. Davis, daughter of Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's ambassador-at-large, will be married at 5 p. m. toda, to Robert Whitton Stuart, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Whitton Stuart of Princeton, N. J.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Elmore McKee, rector of St. George's Church, in the bride's home on East 79th street.

The bride's father will give her in marriage. She will wear the ivory satin gown which her three sisters, Mrs. John Fennelly, Mrs. John C. Potter and Mrs. J. Sterling Getchell, wore as brides, and a Juliet cap with a veil.

Blame U. S. for High Prices

Tokyo, March 23 (AP)—Finance Minister Toyotaro Yuki blamed American and British armament expansion today for scarcity of raw materials and consequent sharp price increases in Japan.

but it led to happier living

One morning, a few months after we were married, I suggested to Jack that we invite the Smiths over to dinner. "Wait till you know how to prepare a real meal . . . not just a lot of frilly stuff," was his sharp answer.

His remark crushed me. I wrote a letter to mother, told her I was a failure as a cook and asked her advice. "Learn to prepare the good solid dishes men like . . . and when it comes to bread, give him Bond," she advised.

So the next day when I drove downtown, I ordered Bond Bread. "I'm not surprised, Mrs. Brown," said the man in the store. "More and more people are buying Bond these days . . . it's the kind of bread the men folks like."

Jack noticed the difference at once. And a few weeks later, when we did have the Smiths over, and they were complimenting me on the dinner, Jack said, "Let's drink a toast to the best little wife in the world."

MEN like a real, substantial bread . . . with an honest, stick-to-the-ribs quality. That's Bond . . . the home-like loaf. Wholesome, toothsome, completely satisfying.

Same pure ingredients your mother used in home-baking years ago. And perfectly baked. That's why so many folks have been eating Bond for years. It's the kind of bread that calls for more.

See if you don't agree. Try Bond Bread for a week. Put it to the taste test. Watch the family go for it . . . especially your husband. Start today. Say "Bond" instead of just "bread" to your grocer.

Action in the Spotlight of a News Picture Era

Boston American Cameras Record the Story's Climax

Pictures reproduced here are but a few of the graphic camera studies printed exclusively for Boston Evening American readers during the month past.

All Pictures On This Page Copyright, 1937, by Boston Evening American

DAWN—(Above) Symbolic of the new era in news pictures is this Boston American camera study of the dawn that few have ever seen—17,500 feet over Boston with the Army's weather pilot. Army fliers who climb day after day miles above still-sleeping Boston live again the thrill of this experience. They are the first to meet the waking day.

HUMAN EMOTION—(Above) Eighty years of age, this North Andover man shot and killed his son, mistaking him for a burglar. A graphic study of poignant grief. "My son, my son," he moaned in grief. The murder charge which was standing against him when this picture was taken was later dismissed. The lines of sorrow remain.

ACTION—(Above) Reluctant to pose, a Norfolk County witness is snapped by the speed camera in a futile hurdle to avoid the lens. Leaping from a balcony at a side entrance, he attempted to get away unnoticed. Instead he found the cameraman waiting.

MORE ACTION—Boston's firemen eat smoke, quench flame at a $100,000 downtown blaze. Climbing the aerial ladders, firemen fought to halt the flames before the blaze leaped to adjoining structures. Three alarms were sounded as this fire, fed by chemicals, destroyed valuable equipment and burst through the roof. The camera caught tongues of fire, intensely hot, forking out at firemen as they mounted into the smoke swirl.

Herbert W. C. Browne's Exhibit Highlights Social Calendar

By BETTY ALDEN

YESTERDAY was another pre-view day at the Art Galleries about town . . . and the one that attracted the most distinguished social gathering was at Doll and Richards on Newbury street . . . where Herbert W. C. Browne opened an exhibition of his water color paintings with a private view and tea party.

The occasion was quite a reunion of older Boston socialites, of whom Mr. Browne is a contemporary . . .

Mrs. Charles S. Bird, Jr.

Mr. Browne's paintings, which he has done at odd times during his long career as an architect, are mostly pictorial records of his travels in sunny Italy . . . and though many of his friends are not artists, they, too, brought with them mementos of the travels of their set . . . Several had letters which had been received from friends or relatives on trips, and which they wanted to pass around to others to read and enjoy . . .

Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., dressed in a springlike navy blue serge swagger suit with a wide brimmed navy baku hat, was a very cordial and agreeable hostess at one end of the tea table . . . while Aimee Lamb, a well known Boston artist, looked very attractive as she presided over the coffee end of the table . . . Miss Lamb's brown angora dress and turban were brightened by bows of purple and green grosgrain ribbon . . .

Mrs. Bird's mother, Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton, and the latter's other daughter, Mrs. Oliver Wolcott, were among the most interested spectators wandering through the galleries . . .

Since most of the guests are well traveled, the scenes of Lake Como, the viaducts, and all the famous villas in Italy, which Mr. Browne has reproduced with such reality, made them recall the soft brilliancy of sunlight on the picturesque Italian landsape . . .

Mr. William Richardson was particularly careful to scrutinize every painting and pick out some of the spots he will visit on his forthcoming trip to the Mediterranean . . . He is sailing early in April on the Rex, for a two-month cruise which will take him to many warm sunny resorts in Italy . . . His sister, Mrs. Leverett S. Tuckerman of Beacon street, is taking the trip with him and was one of the guests at yesterday's tea . . . She was dressed in deep burgundy red from head to foot, and carried a small purse of figured challis from which she produced one of the round robin letters we mentioned above, and handed it over to her brother to read in his leisure time . . .

* * *

Beaver Coats and Capes Popular

OLGA MONKS and her mother both attended the exhibit . . . and Mrs. Gardiner M. Lane was attractively turned out in a purple coat and hat with a beaver cape and a corsage of fresh violets, according to the style recently popularized by Mrs. Vincent Astor . . .

Mrs. Larz Anderson was another in beaver . . . hers a swagger coat with brown dress and accessories . . . and Miss Ellen Bullard, one of the close friends of Mr. Browne's who assisted in making everyone welcome, wore black with a velvet beret adorned with royal blue feathered wings . . .

Mrs. A. L. West Movius sported a new spring suit of gray tweed trimmed with gray kidskin . . . a velvet beret to match and gray slippers . . .

Peggy Otis has adopted the Spanish style in at least one of her spring outfits . . . for yesterday she wore a bolero dress with a wide red sash and a matador's hat of black felt, edge rolled up and all . . .

Civic Federation Meets at Chilton Club

MRS. CHARLES FANNING AYER, in her black with Persian, wore a new straw hat trimmed with a heavenly shade of pink silk, found many friends to chat with . . . among the many others who dropped in were Dudley Pickman, Sr., Morris Carter, Mrs. Charles Perkins, Francis Kershaw, Mrs. William Walton, Mrs. Margaret French Cresson, Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, Mrs. Edward Motley and Mrs. Jasper Whiting . . .

Also Mrs. Robert W. Lovett, who dropped her cudgel as leader of the discussion of taxation at the meeting of the National Civic Federation at the Chilton Club, to hurry over to Doll and Richards and enjoy a bit of relaxation with a cup of tea and view of a few soft, restful scenes in Italy . . .

The Clinton Club's ballroom was filled to the doors with women who take a serious interest in the problems of taxation . . . Mrs. John Gorham Palfrey and Mrs. James B. Ayer of Milton, leaders in the good work of the Civic Federation, sat together . . . while Mrs. George R. Agassiz, Mrs. Arthur W. Bell, Mrs. Barrett Wendell and Mrs. Philip Coyle were others taking a lively interest in the discussion . . .

Mrs. Hugh Hensley wore a brown suit of becoming lines, bordered with red fox, and stopped to enroll as a member of the women's division of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers' Association, of which Mrs. Lovett is chairman . . .

Mrs. Robert C. Terry was one of the more youthful women interested in the meeting, wore a moleskin jacket with a dark dress, and a little turban with a multicolored twisted band making a halo around her face . . . Others present were Mrs. H. Parker Whittington and Mrs. Delano Wight . . .

Silver Lecture Attracts Smart Set Leaders

Mrs. Wilder Wheelwright was a few steps ahead of the Easter parade in the large, black straw hat appliqued with red and green flowers, which she wore to the "silver" tea under auspices of the Hodgson Kennard Company at the Ritz-Carlton yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Franklin Hobbs who was with Mrs. Wheelwright also had touches of bright springlike green on her black hat, to be in keeping with the bright silver and spring flowers spread out on the tables.

This silver tea, was not an anniversary, but the setting for a lecture on the "Romance of Silver" describing the interesting practical and decorative uses to which man has put silver since ancient times.

Miss E. Alberta Brenner of New York, the lecturer, brought with her, a large display of silver pieces of all descriptions. One of the most interesting to the feminine members of her audience was the bracelet which she wore herself. A tiny coffee pot and a tiny silver pitcher, both wrought from dimes, are pendants on the bracelet. The miniature pitcher was so carefully made that the words "One Dime" are still legible on the bottom.

Mrs. Andrew Wilson, Jr., took one of her sons to the lecture and exhibit. Others glimpsed in the large audience were Mrs. Charles S. French, Miss Aline Kilham and Mrs. Louis A. Shaw.

CHAPTER 25

A short, sharp yelping Sandy bounded forward to where she sat. David stood motionless for a lengthening instant.

"Paula!" The unmistakable ring of gladness in his outcry sang in her ears, in her heart. He came rapidly toward her, his limp emphasized, as always, by bodily fatigue. "I was wishing for you all day in the back of my mind."

"How nice!" She quivered inwardly at the touch of his hand.

"Lillian's been alone since daybreak—the forest fires've spread to the mainland, but fortunately a heavy rain has ended the danger temporarily. You've seen her, of course."

Paula nodded. "She's taking a nap."

"Sandy, stop that," David ordered. "Where are your manners?"

But Sandy, with another sharp yelp, had crowded his shaggy body close against Paula and laid his nose in her hand. She dropped on her knees beside the dog and stroked the rough head.

The trusting, pathetic dog-eyes searched hers, then with a furious waving of his stump of a tail he sealed his part of the bargain of friendship with warm, slobbering kisses on her hand and face.

"You're a friend for life, Paula,"—David's eyes shone, but almost immediately troubling doubts darkened them.

"Sandy's always been a gentleman. I've never had to punish him before, but from the first Lilian's hated him. Perhaps later on—

"You're a gift of the gods to us up here," he resumed after a brief pause, in a brighter tone.

"A birthday gift," Gardy told me," smiling, she answered the question in his eyes. "But I had to make sure you were still alive. Lilian was frightened—she wired me," she hurried to explain.

She saw a harassed expression in his face but he did not speak at once. Then, "Do you mind?" He reached into his coat-pocket for pipe and tobacco. "These always seem to belong to the woods." He pulled at his lighted pipe without speaking for a space.

"Lilian and you've always been so close, I suppose she's told you about—what happened up here." He shuddered and looked away swiftly from the giant bowl.

"Yes."

She gazed up at him. He was frowning. He seemed to be thinking deeply, bitterly.

"David," she half-whispered, and unconsciously moved toward him.

"I've myself to blame," he said to himself, but her ears caught the low-spoken words. "She's only a child—I should have known—" He stopped, blew several thick smoke rings, then said abruptly, "She saved my life, do you know that? But for her I'd probably be floating downstream—"

"David,—no, no."

"That's what it means to be a cripple, a weak, spineless—"

"You're not a cripple. You're not weak or spineless."

"Thank you, Paula." He smoked furiously. "Two such friends as you and Gardy quicken one's sense of life— Look, Paula," he cried with startling suddenness and slipping his arm in hers drew her to the rim of a ledge of rocks. His hands still on her arm they stood gazing together at the river, a changing sheet of azure, rose and gold, a burnished mirror for the splendor of the sunset in the arch of the west.

Neither spoke, but contentment, calmness, utter peace with the world surged through Paula. It was exquisite to be alone with him, close to him. A feeling of fine inner union with him gladdened her. They had so much in common, the same hunger for beauty, the same ardor for life with its pattern of shadow and sunlight, joy and sorrow.

"Sister"

"Sister!" He spoke softly as though to the accompaniment of the wind singing in the trees. For a friendly instant he looked down at her with that boyish smile which is always charming in one who has left early youth behind.

So they stood, eyes seeing deep into each other. His face changed suddenly. An expression that she could not name, could not withstand, softened his face.

"Paula," he said harshly.

"Yes, David!" Tenderness shook her voice. "David—"

Then Lilian's clear, prolonged, "Hallo-oo, Paul!" Where are you?"

The potent spell was broken.

Heavy rain washed away fear of forest fires on Pine Island for the time, but the unceasing downpour drove Lilian to the verge of hysteria.

"Day," she cried desperately at dinner table when the fourth stormy night was closing in, "let's go tomorrow with Paula. I'm terribly sunk. The rain—" she tightened her lips to stop their quivering.

"Joe promises clearing weather tomorrow," David reassured her. "Maybe we can coax Paula to stay over for that power-boat trip to Rainbow Lake." He smiled across the low mound of flowers at his sister-in-law.

Paula shook her head. "I'd love to, but I told you mother wasn't well when I left."

David gazed at his wife and his eyes lighted. He seemed to have found a satisfying answer to a puzzling question.

"You've been homesick for your mother up here in the woods, dear. I never thought—The devotion of you girls to your mother is fine. It makes me realize all I've missed in life, never knowing my mother."

So, with quiet consideration for Lilian's restlessness of spirit he cut short the honeymoon on Pine Island, and the Stewarts traveled homeward with Paula.

A fortnight after their return Paula was sitting on her porch. She had to pull her eyes away from the bright colors of the October afternoon, golden haze, blue sky, trees living torches of yellow, crimson and russet, back to her handwork.

Deliberately she recalled that brief, intimate moment in the twilight on Pine Ridge hill. Many times she had relived that moment, when, she felt sure, David suddenly became aware of her, not as Lilian's sister, but as an individual, as herself, as Paula.

Knit a Little Suit

IT HAS all the by-now famous characteristics of the spring's fashion favorite—the little suit. Extra pockets (four is the magic number), a short jacket, single-breasted closing, a young little collar, and a general air of ingenuous youthfulness that has "made" the little suit. It is knitted in a tweed-ish yarn, and comes in all the high pastels that make this season's color schemes such fun to work on. For your favorite brown sports accessories you might knit the suit in a turquoise shade, then turn the tables on this color scheme and look very fresh and original by combining navy blue accessories of town feeling for a shopping trip. Married Comrades

CHAPTER 257

AS Nell Gibbs said that she could see her husband's lantern in the boat which held Mary and her injured husband, Dr. Rickey moved toward the door.

I had risen with Dr. Rickey, and was already at the door.

"I'll get Williams at once," I said, "and send him immediately to the pier."

"Thank you," Dr. Rickey said gravely. A glance backward as I hurried across the space between the two camps showed me the physician following the beam of Ed Shanklin's flashlight down the crooked, rocky path to the pier from which Noel and Mary had embarked so gaily but a few hours before.

GOES TO PIER

Now they were being brought back, Noel hurt—how seriously nobody knew as yet—and Mary frantic with grief and terror.

Sending up a fervent petition that fate would be kindly instead of malign, I hurried into the kitchen, meeting Williams at the door.

"They're coming in, aren't they?" he asked.

"Yes, they want you at the pier."

Junior and Roderick, who evidently had been closely watching the cooking, waited decorously until I had finished speaking, then Junior put a question that evidently came from both his heart and his stomach.

"Say, Mums, if Noel isn't terrible hurt, kin we eat?"

"I am going to give you your supper right away, but I am not going to stay here while you eat it. I must go over and help Aunt Katherine."

"Kin we help?" Junior asked with what I knew was purely rhetorical sacrifice. "We don't need to eat."

But I forgot the children completely as Dr. Rickey's flashlights, one in either hand, encircled me for an instant, as he whirled them for the benefit of the stretcher bearers, who, I realized with terror, were carrying a silent burden.

Slips of Speech

At the track meet, Daisy said, "That dark-COMPLECTED boy ALMOST jumped six feet." "Complexioned," Daisy, not "complected." And to say "almost jumped" means he didn't jump at all. Put the almost in front of "six" and make yourself crystal clear.

People whose speech is admired don't say, "I suspicioned it," for "I suspected it"; "he enthused" for "he was enthusiastic."

Our 40-page booklet, Common Errors in English, points out the little slips of speech that annoy cultivated people. Learn the smooth substitute for these errors. Make your speech acceptable anywhere.

Send 15c for our booklet, COMMON ERRORS IN ENGLISH, to Boston Evening American, Home Institute, 109 West 19th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Haste DOESN'T Make WASTE

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Procrastination has no place at theb ridge table. Tricks that are not taken at the proper time have a habit of melting under the heat of a squeeze or coup.

To use a slangy but succinct phrase, "he found out different."

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

North:
♠ 7 6 3
♡ Q 8 4
♢ Q 10 6 5
♣ 10 7 3

West:
♠ K 9 8 5 2
♡ 6 3
♢ 9 8 4 2
♣ Q 5

East:
♠ Q 4
♡ A K J 10 2
♢ K J 7 3
♣ 6 4

South:
♠ A J 10
♡ 9 7 5
♢ A
♣ A K J 9 8 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♢	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	3 ♡
Double	3 ♠	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	4 ♣	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

North's one diamond response was stretching things a bit, even on the non-committal one-over-one principle. With only two Queens and the bad 4-3-3-3 distribution, North's best course was a simple pass.

When North passed over South's urging-bid of three clubs, however, East decided to enter the fray, since he could do nothing against clubs. South felt that one trick in his partner's hand would certainly defeat three hearts—hence the double. West's rescue with his miserable spade suit was incomprehensible and, of course, equally indefensible.

That he escaped from severe punishment was due to East's excellent holding and the fact that North felt he could not stand the double. East's double of the less-than-game contract was justified; he could not know that his partner had entered the bidding with almost a "bust."

A SERIOUS ERROR

West opened the six of hearts; dummy ducked, and East's ten held the trick. East cashed the King, but then made the very bad mistake of shifting to the spade Queen. What motivated this play cannot be imagined. Declarer was marked from the bidding with three hearts, and West with two.

But even if this holding had been reversed, there was no reason for East's failure to lay down the Heart Ace.

Declarer jumped on the Queen of spades with the Ace, and drew two rounds of trumps, then led the ten of spades. West probably "thought" that his partner might have the blank Jack at this state, and therefore ducked.

Declarer did not give the defenders another chance to redeem their errors. He laid down the diamond Ace, and threw East on lead with the third heart.

Now, whatever East did would be fatal: to lead another heart would allow declarer to discard his remaining spade while dummy ruffed, and the play of the diamond King, declarer ruffing, would merely establish dummy's Queen for a spade discard.

Insomnia Has Numerous Causes

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

RECENTLY I told you about sleep and how essential it is to the maintenance of good health. Today I want to tell you about insomnia, the inability to sleep.

The cause of this disturbance is often difficult to determine. It is frequently found in adults who have been forced to face marked physical or mental strain.

It rarely afflicts infants and children, and it is most commonly observed among middle-aged persons.

At times insomnia is one of the effects of faulty eating habits, worry, undue fatigue or the keeping of irregular sleeping hours. Overeating and excessive smoking or drinking are other factors that must be given consideration.

Great advances have been made in the treatment of this unpleasant complaint, but I repeat that it is often difficult to overcome.

If it can be traced to some disturbance in the digestion, the problem is not so great. Correction of the bad eating habits causes the sleeplessness to disappear.

The victim should be instructed as to the importance of carefully chewing the food, avoiding irregular eating hours and keeping away from emotional upsets.

HABITS IMPORTANT

Simple insomnia disappears soon after giving attention to the general health and the personal habits by hygiene. Most of those who have it remain free from attacks as long as they pay attention to the diet, health habits, rest and relaxation.

As soon as they become overworked or careless in these matters, the insomnia returns.

If you are a victim of this disturbance of sleep, consult with your doctor. Make sure that the trouble is not one of the symptoms caused by some internal disorder. It may merely be a question of tired nerves, but every case requires investigation.

A warm bath taken before bed time is often of great value. Avoid cold and heavy meals before retiring. Make sure that the sleeping chamber is well ventilated and free from noise and distracting sounds.

If you have many mental problems that tax you during the day, try to discard them in the evening. Of course, this is difficult, but it is a habit that can be acquired. If you insist on taking your worries to bed with you, your sleep will be delayed and disturbed.

Caution Needed for Overweight Children

By IDA JEAN KAIN

Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"DOES a child outgrow overweight?" This question is frequently asked by the weight-minded mother.

If your child's overweight is the result of an excess of food, you can help her to outgrow it by changing her food habits.

In fact, many doctors favor maintenance rather than reduction of a child's weight. Unless the fat storage is progressive, growth of the child automatically lowers the amount of excess fatty tissue.

Weight 20 per cent above normal for height and age constitutes overweight in children. Nothing less than this percentage is classed as excess weight, and from 10 to 15 per cent above the standard is considered normal.

A restricted diet for a child must be even more carefully planned than that of the adult. Requirements for growth and development must always be met in the child's dietary—even though she is reducing. Therefore, protein, vitamins, minerals—especially calcium, phosphorus and iron—must be provided in optimum amounts.

This is as true for the inactive, obese child as for the normally active normal weight. The highly strung, nervous child who is constantly on the move has a higher calorie requirement than the inactive overweight.

Examine the Diet

Even though a child is gaining weight, it is not necessarily getting the foods essential to normal growth and development. Examine the diet of the overweight child and you will be likely to find large amounts of fats, sugars and starches—candy, bread and butter, jellies, jam, sugar, cream and pastries.

When usually large amounts of these foods are taken, the child eats less fruits, vegetables and other low-calorie but important foods.

If your child's weight should be reduced, see to it that the daily diet contains the following: Three glasses of whole milk, one egg, 300 calories in potatoes and whole grain bread and cereals, fruit and a vegetable other than potato at every meal, and at least one teaspoon of cod liver oil. Candy, cake, preserves, etc., have no place in this dietary, and the total calorie intake may be safely limited by the deletion of these fat-forming foods.

Medical Care Needed

There is, of course, the child with endogenous, or glandular overweight. It is of utmost importance that the abnormally overweight child should have medical care, not only from the standpoint of health, but also from the fact that she is subject to the teasing comments of her playmates, possibly to suffer seriously from an inferiority complex.

If you are anxious about your child's weight, you will be interested in the experiment conducted by Drs. Hanah Muller and Anne Topper, of New York, in which the weight of children from five to fourteen years of age was successfully reduced.

There were twenty-five children, and the calorie allowance ranged from 1,125 to 1,635 calories per day. To stimulate growth and metabolism, the protein content was high—40 per cent. The balance of the diet was 40 per cent carbohydrates, and 20 per cent fat. Weight losses varied from nine to twenty-four pounds, with thirteen and one-half pounds as the average.

Here is the significant thing about the experiment: On this scientifically-planned diet, these children averaged one and one-half inches in growth, instead of the expected one inch for the period. In every case there was marked improvement in physical condition, physical activity, eating habits, and schoolwork.

A brand-new dish for Easter
HAM AND EGG PIE

TASTIEST PIE I EVER ATE... AND SUCH FLAKY CRUST
OF COURSE, IT'S MADE WITH Spry

PIES, CAKES, FRIED FOODS—everything now doubly delicious made with Spry

HAM AND EGG PIE
A tempting main dish for Easter or any day

4 eggs, slightly beaten
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon baking powder
½ cup milk
2 cups cooked ham, cut in ½-inch cubes
1 cup grated cheese
1 unbaked pie shell

Beat eggs slightly and add pepper, baking powder, milk, ham and cheese. Pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake in very hot oven (475° F.) 20 minutes, or until knife inserted comes out clean. (No soggy undercrust, made this new way with digestible Spry.) Serve with grilled tomatoes or a green salad. Serves 6.

SPRY PIE SHELL

1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup Spry
3 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt together. Add ⅓ of Spry and cut in until mixture is as fine as corn meal. (Done in a jiffy with triple-creamed Spry!) Add remaining Spry and continue cutting until particles are size of a navy bean. Sprinkle water, 1 tablespoon at a time, over mixture. With a fork, work lightly together until a dough is formed. Roll dough ⅛-inch thick. Place dough in pie plate and let relax 5 minutes. Pat with ball of dough. Trim pastry ½ inch larger than pan and turn back edge. Flute rim.

DOUBLY delicious and so digestible, so easy to make! No long, hard beating when you mix a cake. Triple-creamed Spry blends like magic, cuts mixing time in half, gives the lightest, finest flavored cakes ever. Try Spry for flakier pastry, too—crisp, tender fried foods that melt in your mouth and are as easy to digest as if baked. No smoke when frying, either. Get Spry today. Stays fresh and sweet indefinitely right on the pantry shelf.

Of the many trends that sweep through Hollywood, one of the longest lasting has been the preference for Luckies. AUSTEN LAKE

Monkey Business, Or John Benson, the Man Who Lives in a Zoo

AUSTEN LAKE

THIS IS THE TIME OF THE YEAR when I mooch off to Nashua, N. H., to eat turtle eggs and monkey steak with John Benson, the wild beast broker who runs an animal boarding house near the city limits. Not that John, who is a benign grandsire with a voice like an opera Basso, ever fries his fauna or serves them as epicurean novelties. The pinkish delicacy, which he calls "dromedary giblets" and comes cunningly curried on a platter, may be canned salmon. The anchovies that he terms "pressed yak liver" is herring. John is a quaint host.

I used to think that Eddie Shore, the ex-hardware hockey athlete, or Reggie McNamara, the old six-day bike rider, were all time champions for having their skins patched with fiddle gut. Both have been ripped and stitched. Both carry purple traceries of old scars on their bodies.

* * *

NASHUA'S ANIMAL FAIR

BENSON DEALS IN WILD LIFE ON THE SAME wholesale scale that C. F. Adams distributes groceries in his First National stores. At your order John will deliver a herd of standard brand sea cows, or small orders like a musical mouse. He will ship your beast either ignorant or schooled to perform parlor tricks.

It would cost a little less, for example, to buy an uncouth leopard than one coached to cuddle the baby

[illegible]

* * *

ROMANCE WITH A LADY GORILLLA

I NEVER TIRE OF HEARING BENSON tell how he went in to shoo a cageful of hunger striking wolves to bed at Norumbega Park some years ago. The CIO agitators must have been there ahead of him, because three of the collective bargainers ripped off strips of his personal bark. And another time when he was nursing a shipment of animals from Africa, a 21 foot python, built like a length of fire hose, got loose from a hamper in his stateroom and curled around a steampipe over his bunk.

John was asleep at the time and says he was slightly mortified to find the serpent dozing six inches above his face. He tells how he unwound the python, a coil at a time, and put it back in its box. Only when John relates his adventures he tells them with less emotion than a golfer might explain how he missed a two foot putt for the caddy fees and clubhouse brandy

* * *

In his youth Benson wrestled bears [illegible] not the [illegible] society bears of our later day, but real rough and rowdy cubs. And he says that for real dirty wrestling a heavyweight bear would make [illegible] look like a girl scout in a tatting contest.

[illegible]

He pays younger and more agile men up to $[illegible] a week to teach his pets how to hurdle through hoops.

He has twenty buildings housing his specimens, which include [illegible] lions, 11 tigers, 3 elephants, 10 wild cats, a chimpanzee [illegible] and a swarm of other samples, some in quarantine and all awaiting delivery.

* * *

HARDEST TO TRAIN HE SAYS IS THE CAMEL, [illegible] the animal kingdom. Most savage [illegible] amenable to reason is the hyena, which, far from being cowardly, can break a man's shinbone with a single crunch of its jaws.

Betsy is John's pampered pet and roams around the farm like a sheep dog, [illegible] for peanuts, a picture of domestic contentment.

Sometimes to show his hold [illegible] John shakes his finger reprovingly [illegible] Betsy [illegible] and hangs her head like a shy child. John says she can blush. But then that's John.

Have some more of this [illegible] walrus [illegible] soon handing me a plate of veal. That's John too. It's the school boy in him.

Defensive Game

The combination of Allan Shields and Jack Portland can't compare with the grand old master, Lionel Conacher, and his partner, Cy Wentworth. In the nets a very slight nod must go to Tiny Thompson over Bill Beveridge.

There is apt to be a very conservative game tonight, which may be [illegible] in view of the fact that both clubs have so much at stake.

[illegible] It will be just too bad for the club that starts making mistakes.

Braddock Ducks Legal Punches | Lou-Shucco Bout Barred

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

There isn't much rest for a heavyweight champion of the world—even in Florida. Just when Jimmy Braddock was getting a few hot tips on some of the horses at Tropical Park, an attorney for the New York Garden began legal proceedings in Miami which would prevent the title holder from clashing with Joe Louis at Chicago on June 22

The Garden has a contract calling for Braddock's first title defense bout, and isn't doing any cheering because Mike Jacobs' Twentieth Century Club has announced it has signed the champion for a tussle with Joe Louis.

"Braddock cannot break his contract with the Garden and get away with it," Johnston said to me recently. "Didn't I try to get Primo Carnera to jump out of the Garden's heavyweight circus when I was promoting on my own, and all I ended up with was a flock of injunctions and a headache.

"I wanted Carnera to box Jack Sharkey, and at the time big Primo was under contract to battle for the Garden

"A Federal judge hit me a harder punch than I ever received when I was boxing. He mentioned something about contracts being sacred. I didn't think anything in the boxing game was sacred up to that time.

"I had to wait until after Carnera's contract with the Garden expired before I could drop Primo into a Brooklyn ring with Sharkey."

JIMMY WALKER ON CONTRACTS

[illegible]

"The sacredness of contracts is guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States," declared Walker. "This contract was entered into in good faith by the city of New York and by the traction company.

"The city of New York has kept its end of the bargain, and intends to live up to every letter in this agreement. The traction company does not wish to keep its promises any longer.

"The only question before this court is whether the traction company will be permitted to run out of its contract. I do not believe the court will permit it to do so. I still believe parties must keep agreements which they make."

FRED HOEY Writes:

BOSTON SCOUTS MUFFED 'EM | GOWDY, DUFFY HAVE RIGHT IDEA

Hello, everybody. This is Fred Hoey speaking:

Baseball scouts who perform their duties efficiently and faithfully are as much a part of baseball as the ball itself. Yet Branch Rickey of the Cardinals, pioneer of the baseball farm system bug, now so contagious, believes scouts are on their way out.

FRED HOEY

Rickey maintains scouts soon will be as scarce as Indian scouts and will be replaced by a series of summer camps, at which prospective major league material will be assembled for inspection en masse.

Right away Rickey claims pioneering rights to the establishment of these camps by the Cardinals and the Cincinnati Reds. Naturally a man with the given name of Branch puts himself out on the limb with this assertion.

He overlooks the fact that Hugh Duffy and Hank Gowdy have been carrying on this work with youngsters for the Red Sox and Bees at the local ball parks for many years.

We don't believe any big league club could operate successfully without a scouting staff [illegible]

Boston scouts have gone thousands of miles into the hinterlands in quest of talent and have overlooked material right in their own back yard, so to speak. New England is today, and always has been, a fertile spot for baseball scouts.

We sometimes muse that if these Gullivers of scouting society were tipped off that Captain Bligh and Fletcher Christian of the Mutiny League were good looking pitchers, they'd take the next boat to Pitcairn Island and pass up a chance to look over a likely prospect playing with the Rusty Mugs or Shiny Dippers on Boston Common.

Mickey Cochrane, Gabby Hartnett, Tommy Padden, Clyde Sukeforth, Cliff Bolton and Jimmy Wilson, at some time in their careers, were eligible for purchase by Boston clubs, if the latter's scouts had been more alert.

Hank Greenberg Guesses Right

Hank Greenberg played with East Douglas, and Jean Dubuc signed him to a Detroit contract. There's an interesting side-story in this connection. Paul Kritchell, Yankee scout, also was trying to do business with Greenberg. It suddenly dawned on Hank that he had little chance of displacing Lou Gehrig, so he passed up the Yanks for Detroit. What a fortunate choice! Gehrig has played 1808 consecutive games, 10 years of steady play.

Coal Workers, Operators at Variance

Bituminous coal production is now running at the highest rate since 1930. It may be that some part of this comparatively high rate is based on demand from consumers who anticipate labor troubles in the coal fields. As outlined by the Administration and Research Corporation the workers' demands and the stand of the mine owners show variance.

Besides the points shown in this chart the United Mine Workers under the leadership of CIO's Lewis are demanding a 15 cent increase in loading, 7 cents per ton increase in cutting, a 20 per cent increase in pay for deadwork, 7 cents more per ton for pick mining and two weeks vacation with pay.

Are Major Problems Today

New York, March 23—In its summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. of New York currently comments that business men are faced with two important problems in making plans for the future, the course of commodity prices over the near and longer term and the effects of current labor trends on future employer-employe relationships.

INCOME TAXES

Estimates ABOVE ACTUAL Returns

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Preliminary estimates of income tax collections heard in financial circles indicate that someone, somewhere, was decidedly over optimistic in thinking that $840,000,000 would be taken in.

As matters now look the Treasury will be fortunate to come within $150,000,000 of this figure. All of which suggests that the deficiency must be met by new borrowing.

It is not so much that new loans, not anticipated, must be made that interests this writer. Rather is it the question of taxation. Last Wednesday we wrote here that as March 15 faded into the background and spending bills are ground out by the legislative mill, ideas on taxes often changed. This year, with poorer than expected income tax returns, it seems this thought is worthy of extra consideration and, regardless of political promises, the need of additional levies will become more acute. Then, too, added borrowing to balance income and outgo is inflationary and Mr. Eccles can be counted on to press his case for tax curbs with such a good argument at hand.

* * *

The current request of Jones & Laughlin employes for another pay raise, despite the fact they received a raise in daily pay rates on March 16, brings up an exceedingly interesting question. All because the employes themselves rap the 40 hour work-week and have the support of the employers in their complaint. Despite the fact Jones & Laughlin workers received the equivalent of 80 cents per day increase, their envelopes at the end of the five-day week contain less money. Steel laborers, for instance, are now getting $25 per week for 40 hours, where before they were paid $25.20 for 48 hours. The company agrees with their employes, but says industrial and government sentiment forced the step.

* * *

Notebook: With the cost of living lifting steadily one can not blame the workers for complaining . . . Times, for them, will grow progressively harder from a theoretical viewpoint as prosperity picks up momentum . . . That can only last just so long, however, as such crippling of buying power ultimately wrecks recovery . . . But some one is to blame for such an unwelcome situation . . . And we feel it belongs at the door of those who misled workers into believing an overnight change from a 48 to a 40 hour week could be accomplished without disrupting consequences . . . Most of which would hit the workers themselves hardest.

* * *

The speed with which stock prices bounced back today following the persistent Monday decline, even though it was on small volume, naturally heightens the impression stocks should be liquidated on the rally. Rarely have technicians been so far apart on their ideas of what may happen during a reactionary phase as at present. So instead of hedging on the idea of lightening accounts we prefer to push it on the theory the outlook is decidedly clouded. We have no iron-clad ideas on this reaction, but feel the 170-174 level on the Dow-Jones industrial index could mark bottom. Caution until the outlook clears will be the watchword.

* * *

Ticker Ticks: In one respect we do not hesitate to commit ourselves to a definite policy . . . And that is sell stocks after any speedy rally . . . Because then it will appear as though a two-legged decline is in prospect . . . The one seen to date with the intervening rally followed by a slump to new lows . . . Rails might just as well be disposed of to provide cash for later buying . . . If in the rail group again we will not consider anything lost even though higher prices are paid . . . Such expense will simply come under the head of intelligent insurance against the unforseen

STOCKS In Narrow RANGE

STEELS, RAILS, MOTORS UP

New York, March 23 (INS)—The stock market settled into a quiet and narrow trading range today. Volume was restricted by threat of further labor difficulties, with the protracted Chrysler strike still tightly deadlocked.

Steels, rails, motors, coppers and mail orders were the leaders on the upside, a few blue-chip issues also chalking up sizable gains.

U. S. Steel spurted more than 3 points at one time along with Youngstown Sheet & Tube while Bethlehem and Republic climbed more than a point. These gains were pared slightly later.

Southern Pacific held half of an initial jump of 2 points, Pennsylvania, N. Y. Central and Atchison running up about as much.

Coppers Up

Pacemakers in the copper division included American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco, each moving more than 2 points higher. Anaconda and International Nickel advanced about a point.

Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward gained more than a point in mail orders. Chrysler was up about 2 points, but General Motors held around its previous finish.

Westinghouse Electric and Deere each soared about 4 points before meeting profit-taking. International Paper preferred rose more than 2 while the "A" and "B" did half as well. DuPont slumped more than 2.

Bonds were generally higher, with governments recovering moderately. Grains and cotton eased.

Current Topics

In addition to the automotive field, spread of strikes to stores in several sections of the country was said to render the outlook for retail volumes this month somewhat uncertain.

Recent strength of paper company shares brought forecasts of a further increase in imports of paper products in coming months despite the world shortage of pulp. In view of the higher prices now prevailing in this country, observers believed foreign producers would be able to do more profitable business here.

Interest was shown in the condition statement of weekly reporting Federal Reserve member banks, as of March 17, which disclosed another substantial drop in loans and investments. The decrease was $103,000,000 under the previous week's total.

The French franc was up 10/64 of a cent at 4.55¾ cents at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions. Sterling was 1-16 of a cent improved at $4.88 7-16.

FARMERS In Cheerful MOOD

PROSPECTS BRIGHT

Chicago, March 23 (AP) — American farmers turned to the tasks of a new growing season today with cheerful prospects of selling many of their products for the highest prices in seven or eight years.

Market prices of wheat, corn, oats, cattle, lambs, hogs and butter, major farm commodities, were at the highest March levels since 1930 and 1929. In some cases they were double and triple the lows of four and five years ago.

Furthermore, estimates that bumper crops might be produced in the United States this year apparently have had no undermining effect on the markets, traders said.

Farmers, now in the midst of a busy spring, plowing earth revitalized by winter snows and idleness, seeding grain crops and tending livestock favored by a mild winter, thus faced the 1937 season in the best spirit in years.

High prices bolstered hope that 1937 farm income would top that of 1936, best since 1929 despite a disastrous drouth.

Optimism Spreads

Farm optimism spread to dozens of industries and hundreds of businesses more or less affected by the fortunes of agriculture. Railroad men, farm implement manufacturers, mail order distributors and others looked forward to new business gains.

The new American wheat crop has the highest value in eight years, based on current market prices. Even so, it may be the largest the United States has produced in six years and may permit this country's re-entry into world export trade under the most favorable conditions since the world war, grain traders said.

Other major wheat growing nations which would be competitors for world trade were expected to have nearly exhausted their exportable supplies by the time new domestic wheat is harvested in July.

D. & H. Sells Block Of N. Y. Central

New York, March 23 (AP)—Delaware & Hudson Co., holding unit for the railroad of that name and coal properties, announced today it had sold for $3,750,000 a block of 85,000 shares of its holdings of New York Central Railroad stock.

The proceeds, it was explained, will be used to help repay at maturity, May 1, $7,500,000 5 per cent bonds.

In financial circles it was estimated the sale brought D. & H. about $2,000,000 profit, based on an average purchase price of about $22 a share, and the recent market price of New York Central of around $50.

Out of the holdings purchased in the open market around the 1932-33 low for stock prices, the D. & H. still has 110,000 shares.

Wool Prices Advance

American Woolen Co. announced general advances in price of all woolen goods 5 cents a yard. Worsted prices have not been set as yet.

B. C. FORBES

Finance WORLD EYES 2 Men

By B. C. FORBES

The eyes of industrialists, financiers, investors are mostly on two men: President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis.

One question anxiously is asked:

"How long will the President of the United States refrain from denouncing the lawlessness now being increasingly indulged in by Lewis' followers?"

* * *

I learned, immediately after settlement of the General Motors strike, that Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan kept in closest touch with Washington and made no move without first ascertaining that it was acceptable there. Unquestionably, Governor Murphy is following the same course in the critical Chrysler negotiations.

* * *

That Lewis is determined to broaden his activities is clearly intimated. His plans apparently are to invade one important industry after another to bring about closed shops wherever possible, to gain recognition for CIO groups where they constitute only a minority of employes.

Even employers recognize the Lewis strategy as shrewd. In the General Motors battle no resort was had to the Wagner labor act, which stipulates that managements must deal solely with representatives of the majority of workers. But in the present Chrysler wrangle this act is freely introduced.

* * *

The steel industry keenly awaits Lewis' move in the Bethlehem Steel situation, now that, according to an official announcement by the company:

"A 98 per cent vote for the employes' representation plan as their collective bargaining agency was cast by employes of Bethlehem Steel Corporation at the 20th annual elections of employes' representatives held by the employes at various Bethlehem plants during the past few days."

Notwithstanding this overwhelming endorsement of the present representation arrangement, Bethlehem Steel declares it is perfectly willing to negotiate with any employes who desire to be represented by Lewis associates.

* * *

Of course, if America's labor legislation were equitable, it would be impossible for any labor union to demand that it be recognized as the sole bargaining agency where it felt it had a majority of employes, yet at the same time insist upon recognition where its followers were greatly in the minority.

Can thoughtful citizens be blamed for feeling gravely perturbed over current events and over possible developments?

Can they be blamed for insisting that justice demands that both sides, managements and unions, be made legally responsible for their acts? Under the labor relations act only employers, only managements, can incur penalties. Union officials and union workers are placed under no obligations, but are left free to break agreements with entire freedom from penalties.

* * *

Nor has America ever before witnessed the spectacle of a union leader contributing a gigantic sum to a presidential candidate's campaign and then demanding repayment in the form of favors. Here, again, the law grants liberties to unions which are denied to corporations: unions can contribute half a million or any other sum to a presidential campaign, corporations are forbidden to contribute one dollar.

* * *

How property owners view what is going on is revealed by the shrinkage in market value of securities, from United States government bonds all down the line.

Unless the atmosphere clears, it is conceivable that Washington may have less reason to worry over how to prevent a business and securities boom than worry over how to keep economic recovery going forward.

* * *

The one important thing Washington could do to allay fears of inflation it persistently refuses to do, namely, curtail its expenditures.

Notwithstanding all the improvement in employment and other conditions, government spending during the first nine months of the current fiscal year has continued at such a rate that the deficit is approximately as large as was the deficit a year ago, despite a gain in revenues of about half-a-million dollars. The promised balanced budget palpably remains thus far in the category of many other promises.

Feb. Auto Sales Below January

Domestic passenger car sales in February are estimated at 260,000 units by R. L. Polk & Co. as against 280,615 in January and 176,651 in February, 1936 on basis of returns from 31 states. This is an increase of 13 per cent over February last year, but 29 per cent under January.

Trucks and commercial car sales are estimated at 41,000 units a drop of 14 per cent under January total of 47,600 and an increase of 17 per cent over February, 1936 total of 40,301.

The Hughes Letter On the Court

THE LETTER written by Chief Justice Hughes to Senator Wheeler knocks the props from under President Roosevelt's "congested calendar" charge against the Supreme Court.

There IS no congestion in the court, has been none for several terms, and none threatens.

The chief justice submits the following statements of fact:

> "The Supreme Court is fully abreast of its work."
>
> "There is no congestion of cases upon our calendars."
>
> "This gratifying condition has obtained for several years. We have been able for several terms to adjourn after disposing of all cases which are ready to be heard."

The President presupposed a state of congestion WHICH DOES NOT EXIST.

To correct that non-existent condition he proposed an enlargement of the court which would, in fact, CREATE congestion.

Chief Justice Hughes declares an increase in the number of justices of the Supreme Court would not promote the efficiency of the court, and gives this as his reason:

> "There would be more judges to hear, more judges to confer, more judges to discuss, more judges to be convinced and to decide."

Mr. Roosevelt originally intimated, for one thing, that the court had more work than it could do, and for another that its members were too old to do it.

What is the nation to think of the REST of the President's scheme, now that the utter lack of substance in these pillars of his program have been exposed?

What the President REALLY wanted to say was that HE did not LIKE the way the court was doing its work, and he wants to get men on the court who will decide things HIS WAY.

The Sit-Down Strikes

CHICKENS come home to roost in the debate on sit-down strikes in the United States Senate at Washington.

The seat of the Federal Government is the PROPER PLACE to debate the sit-down evil, its causes, its effects and its remedies.

For the germ of the sit-down was incubated in Washington, if not with the comfort and consent of the New Deal, then by its SILENCE.

It is the New Deal that has held the authority of the courts up to challenge.

The sit-downers have simply MADE THE CHALLENGE A FACT.

Senator Lewis of Illinois, calling for Presidential intervention, warned the Senate this "sputtering flame may set the house afire."

The reality is more ominous than that.

The house is ALREADY AFIRE.

American courts are being OPENLY DEFIED in a great industrial State and city.

The resources of police and military power in that State appear helpless in the face of a mob which is practicing the compulsion of ANARCHY.

Senator Lewis well may ask:

> "What can be the result if these strikes continue, if acts against society and government shall reach that point where men shall seize courthouses and force shall circumvent the due processes of peaceful government?"

Senator Johnson of California gave the only answer:

> "If the sit-down strike is carried on with the connivance or the sympathy of the public authorities, then the warning signs are out, and down that road LURKS DICTATORSHIP."

Mr. Treadway Tells Us

THE suggestion by Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board that the Federal Budget be balanced by higher taxes is completely unworkable.

That the budget SHOULD be balanced is an undebatable fact.

But higher taxes will CLOSE THE DOOR to a balanced budget.

Representative Treadway of Massachusetts said the only reasonable thing that could be said about the Eccles plan:

> "It would be absolute confiscation of the property of the people, in view of the extravagance of the Administration, to think of balancing the budget now through higher taxes."

The plain truth is that confiscation of property through taxation has already proceeded so far that it is PREVENTING RECOVERY.

Mr. Eccles is entirely right in opposing "balancing the budget at the expense of the destitute and the unemployed."

But he bogs down tragically in thinking that higher taxes will take any part of the load off the destitute.

Death Reigns On Highways

TWENTY-FIVE persons dead last week in automobile accidents, five times as many as during the corresponding period a year ago; thus continues the reign of death on Massachusetts highways.

Declares Motor Vehicles Registrar Goodwin:

> "The record during the past week was probably the worst ever known in this State.
>
> "It is apparent that there must be a general tightening up of law enforcement and a cutting down of speed."

Last week, rightly, the nation and world were shocked by the Texas school tragedy, which took the lives of nearly 500 children. Because these little ones died together, the catastrophe will be remembered as one of the saddest events of all time.

But if Massachusetts highway fatalities continue throughout the year at their present rate, our dead will exceed 1200, or more than twice the number killed in Texas.

The realization of this ought to make every citizen, especially those that drive automobiles, accident-conscious.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, March 23—The passing of Barney Fagan this winter removed the last of the old time minstrels. Many of us thatching gray at the temples would give much to hear one of the old blackface ensembles doing a red bandanna number again.

O. O. McIntyre

There was, too, the Uncle Tom with a chin fringe of gray, a bandanna swinging from his hip, leaning on a stick and peering through steel spectacles as he sung "Old Black Joe." Then the interlocutor stepping gingerly forward in his white-satin-lined red coat.

The hush and his announcement of something like this: "Mr. Billy Benson will now render The Moonlight, the Rose and You." Whereupon the silver tenor would ride some sentimental high notes. Every boy almost wanted to join the minstrel troupe and double in brass.

Add remembrances: Poking the broom straw in the cake to see how nearly it was done.

Most of us are pushovers for the double-deck or two-time monickers. An example was the way America tied on to the Simone Simon business. I always pause to see what Mesdames George B. St. George and Phil de St. Paul are doing when their names appear in print. And there's a radio dealer in the Bronx always good for a pause. His name is Heritz Hoolack. Also what a rock-shipping lilt to Pat Patterson and Donald MacDonald.

Lost Melodies: That plaintive piece Jack Benny is forever starting to play on his fiddle. And can anyone identify Ted Healy's equally sad ballad which never gets further than four bars before someone socks him?

Frank Craven, the actor, is regarded as the most confirmed pipe smoker in the theatrical world. Not excluding the late Lawrence D'Orsay, who sat up every two hours in the night to kindle his briar. Craven has been a pipe addict since his boyhood and is seldom without it. He will accept no stage or movie role that does not permit him to take a puff at intervals. Craven, incidentally, began his trouping at four. His father and mother were troupers and so were his grandparents on both sides.

Since New York's series of apartment house stranglings—four in five months—the peep hole has become a popular gadget on front and back doors, especially in suburban areas. And in some buildings in aristocratic neighborhoods no stranger may ride on service elevators unless examined and then vouched for by tenants they wish to see.

A Madison avenue dog shop man tells me breeds of dogs are made popular by celebrity ownership. Laurette Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart," started a vogue for the type of dog she toted. Dolores, of the Follies, started the white wolf hound trend. "Rin Tin Tin" jumped police dog sales 1000 per cent after his first picture. Right now the Cairn is in highest demand because it is the type of pooch the Duke of Windsor carried into exile.

Speaking of dogs, the Boston has a new one. Coming in out of the chill, he scoots bellywise over the floor in a circle until warmed up, then rolls on his back, feet in the air for a snooze. Sometimes I think that back in his family there must have been complete idiocy.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I ran smack into a sermon the other day—in the last place you'd expect one, a stone yard.

We wanted some paving stones. Are you a garden addict? Then you'll know how you're suddenly seized with uncontrollable frenzies for a Stone Right There—At Once and Immediately! Idiotic, of course.

Elsie Robinson

Moreover, it was Saturday afternoon . . . the beginning of a three-day holiday week-end . . . with every San Franciscan off and away to the blooming hills and tumbling waters.

But what of that! We wanted A Stone. So forth we fared. And there, just over the hill at a turn in the Bayshore boulevard . . . open to wind, sun and the hungry clutch of a million, more or less, motoring gardeners . . . lay the rock yard of our dreams!

Fairy land loot! An open acre filled with such stones as never were . . . slabs of gold and copper, jade green and violet, smoky blue, amber, rose and weathered ivory. All laid in precious, precise piles, without even a fence around them and nothing to guard them but the plainly lettered sign of Walter S. McLean—Crown Ore Mills.

HE COULD AND DID

It couldn't be! People didn't leave things like this! We pounded, prowled with the light dimming, but our frenzy for that stone raging as furiously as ever. Finally, at an hour which any citizen should have been shot for violating, we marched brazenly to a phone and haled the unknown Mr. McLean from his dinner table.

Even as we told our tale, we burned with shame. To summon a perfect stranger—!

But the answering voice was patient, slightly amused, entirely friendly. Yes, he knew how one could get that way about stone. He was that way himself. And one obviously couldn't wait with a garden clamoring for a twisting trail.

So, if we'd just drive around, pick out what we wanted, and leave the general measurements with his friend in the service station—

But—but!!! The wire literally sagged with our amazement. He didn't know us. He'd have to take our word for it all—without recommendations or anything. Surely he couldn't—

FAITH ON GUARD

But, it seemed, he could and had. Forthwith, as casually as though he were quoting the price of slate roofing, he proceeded to state his code.

"Take that stone yard of mine. For 11 years it has been as you see it now—entirely unguarded. And I've been robbed only once, and then by a crowd of irresponsible youngsters. Just as a business policy, I believe that faith pays . . . that it protects you far better than punishments and warnings."

HE BELIEVES IN PEOPLE—AND THEY BACK HIS FAITH. HE TRUSTS PEOPLE AND, NOT OUT OF FEAR, BUT WITH CONSCIOUS PRIDE, THEY REPAY THAT TRUST.

Faith isn't an abstract principle to Walter S. McLean, nor a religious gesture. It's a tangible part of his working equipment.

That empty yard isn't an invitation to the passing stranger's DISHONESTY. It's a challenge to his HONESTY . . .

People will doubtless build fine things out of Walter S. McLean's stone. But no one will ever do a lovelier or more lasting job than he daily does himself with the uplift of his unspoken assurance—"I TRUST YOU!"

Mr. Roosevelt
White House

This is rote on a boat which is comeing back from Europe, I hope. I have took pen in hand to whisper a secrit in your ear, Mr. President. You better stay out of Europe. I seen where somebody thunk up a Plan for you to end all Wars till the next one begins, they wanted you to invite all the Dictaters & Kings to a pease confrince, and give them a Fire Side Chat on how to be Good Neighbors.

Well, Mr. President, everywhere that me and my wife Mabel went in Europe, we ast folks what they thot of your Good Neighbor Plan. They all says they thot it was a bum plan, because they never had a Good Neighbor. They says the only Good Neighbor is a country that isen't there no more.

If I was you, Mr. Pres., I wouldn't let them Forriners coax me to Europe, neither. They are laying in the bushes for a Democrat. It's been 18 Long Years since they got their meat-hooks into a Big Democrat, his name was Woodrow Wilson, they held him for rancid and its cost us 11 Billion Dollars to get him back.

Them forrin countrys don't want to get together, Mr. President. They are too close together as it is. My golly, if you ever throwed a Good Neighbor party where them Dictators could see each other's faces by hand, instead of just hateing each other by telegraft, you would have to call out the U. S. Army to pull your Peace Confrince off of each other.

I wisht I could fill you full of sunshine on this pease thing, Mr. Pres., but I am feared you can't stop them Europeans from fightin each other, without you give them somebody else to fight.

Europe is like the man that loved to beat his wife. A Good Neighbor come over one day and says, "My Friend, I wisht you would please stop beating your wife." and the man says, "O K., whose wife do you want me to beat instead?"

Yours truly,
WINSTON NORMAN.

The Afternoon Tea

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

This department's Washington sleuths bring back a startling story. Down there they are actually serving tea at tea parties!

Edwin C. Hill

Alice Roosevelt Longworth, with her family penchant for doing daring and unusual things, started it, or at any rate, was one of the pioneers.

For reasons to be explained later, many hostesses have been eager to do just this, but convention is a mighty force, even in the challenging and dissenting Washington of today.

You may flaunt strange and disturbing ideas, but social conformity is much more serious business. You can get away with heresy but not with a social solecism. At any rate, the other hostesses followed through with Mrs. Longworth and you now get tea—plain tea—at a tea party.

Checking on New York, through a friend who has time to get about a lot in the haut monde, I find the same trend here, although our social groups aren't so compact or so carefully shepherded as in Washington, and the change is slower.

"The curse of the cocktail hour is the drink sponger," said my friend, "it has become an established custom for the moochers to drop in around 5 o'clock with the certainty of getting a few drinks whether there's a party on or not.

"Usage has decreed that if a guest comes at this time they must man the cocktail shaker. Hostesses are becoming fed up with all this.

"In the first place, it's devilishly expensive and, in extreme cases, the custom has littered the house with alien drunks, of both sexes, when the family just wanted to be left alone for dinner.

BRITISH CUSTOM

"In most cases the reform hostesses start their guests tapering off with maybe a glass or two of sherry along with their tea. Within the last year or two, since recovery set in England, there have been more visiting members of the British nobility than we have had here for years. Now that their shares are picking up, they are traveling again, as usual. If the British ever land on the moon they will have their afternoon tea.

"At an imposing salon in the east seventies, a visiting duchess startled her hostess, just as the cocktails were being served, by a pleasantly insistent demand for tea. They hadn't a lick of tea in the house, and the thirty guests had to wait until they sent out and got some and brewed it, before they could start wolfing their eight or ten cocktails.

"There were a number of such incidents. A matron with one of those bell-ringing names threw a real tea party with no cocktails at the Colony Club, and tea began to appear at the more highly gilded salons, at first with cocktails, then with sherry and now and then just straight tea with nothing on the side. Following the English custom they serve milk with it.

"Be sure to get that straight. Ask for milk when your hostess asks you what you would like with your tea. Of course, they have lemon and will give you a fielder's choice, but look out for the blacklist if you make a wrong guess.

"Again, in the English tradition, they deal you a lot more food than they used to over here, back in the days when tea parties were tea parties. You may draw some fancy kind of pancakes, muffins and cake, and the usual line of canapes which are supposed to go with cocktails.

"The English, dining later than we do, have made some afternoon tea quite a substantial meal, and we are coming to that, too. Here and there the dinner hour is being set back for this season.

"England never did fall for our cocktail hour, except in some of the flashier zones of London's West End. Their afternoon tea was too institutional, too deeply implanted in long usage, to be disturbed by any thing so ephemeral as the alcoholic backwash of our unhappy prohibition experiment.

FRANCE DIFFERENT

"France went in for cocktails much more than England, and in the mixed Franco-American society cocktail parties were quite common. But this, again, was more among the foot-loose and wit-loose elements; the staid upper bourgeois of France and the higher gentry would as soon take a drink of bluing as a cocktail in the late afternoon with the dinner hour near. They go in for subtilties of cuisine over there which would be all messed by our kind of random, catch-as-catch-can drinking.

"There was a time, a few years ago, when our movies were flooding the world when Europeans were worrying a lot about the Americanization of the Continent, in manners and customs. Now they are calm again.

"They probably recall that we took their Codes of Justinian and their Blackstone and their common law and one of their languages and a whole lot of other things and are satisfied that in time we will accept their social usage and not try to impose ours.

"After all, we're just crude entrepreneurs to most Europeans, and just now, more than ever before, they have their lecturers and writers salting down their ideas over here.

"But as to the tea, I'm for it. The British make it a mellow, human function, with a nice friendly afterglow and no hangover. That is all to the good."

Getting back to Washington, I am told that many hostesses, perhaps more closely linked with traditional America than we of New York, are justifiably alarmed about all this feminine elbow-bending that is going on all over the country, and that the new Washington tea party is, in part, a determined stand against it.

TEMPERANCE NEEDED

I have at hand some startling statistics about the increasing number of women alcoholics throughout the country which, since we are coming to a dead end, will have to do for another piece.

These are hospital records and reports of psychologists and doctors treating young girls with pickled brains—altogether disturbing and unpleasant. So here's to afternoon tea!

The New York State Liquor Authority is just now starting a radio campaign to induce temperance and the restrained and sensible use of liquor, headed by Mrs. John S. Sheppard, who did as much as anybody to kill prohibition.

Manufacturing and wholesale liquor interests are co-operating. They say they are as eager as anybody to get this indoor pastime in hand, before the John Laws get after us again.

That's That -:-

By Bruce Gustin

There is plenty of TALK about balancing the national budget. BUT there is no action. Most of our statesmen profess to favor a balanced budget. Not enough of them are willing to stand for the sacrifices which must be made to accomplish that.

There are only two ways to make the expenditures and receipts of the government balance. One is by cutting down expenditures. The other is by increasing taxes. Taxpayers prefer the first method.

But taxspenders are running the government. They won't cut down and they are afraid to boost taxes enough to make revenue equal expenses.

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board suggests higher taxes on incomes and profits to balance the budget. But the reaction to that is decidedly hostile. The memory of recent income tax bills is still fresh in the public mind.

The idea of higher levies, fortunately, does not appeal to congressional leaders on either side. Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, says "Let's go slow about increasing taxes." And Congressman Treadway, ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means committee declares "It would be absolute confiscation of the property of the people, in view of the extravagance of the Administration, to think of balancing the budget now through higher taxes."

It's a pity somebody in authority doesn't think of reducing expenses instead of increasing them and boosting taxes.

The 87-year-old Indiana farmer who wants to keep his coffin in his home and who insists he is going to hold his own funeral before he dies and conduct the service himself has a royal precedent.

Emperor Charles V, history records, celebrated his own obsequies two months before he died.

After his abdication as head of the Holy Roman Empire, he developed a mania for funerals and finally held one for himself.

Accounts differ as to whether he hid behind the black drapes of the chapel to hear the service or put on a shroud and lay in the coffin. In any event, he had the morbid satisfaction of listening to his own funeral.

Miss Clover Kerr, victim of an automobile tragedy in Los Angeles, qualifies as a heroine. After having lost both legs and one of her arms, she left the hospital smiling, courageous and confident of the future. Her ambition now is to write children's stories. It takes courage of the highest quality to go through what she has gone through and still be able to smile and have confidence in anything.

Several members of the Senate Judiciary Committee objected when Senator Burke of Nebraska asked President Green of the American Federation of Labor, "Do you think Justice Brandeis has lost the common touch?" The objectors argued it is "highly improper to indulge in such personalities" in considering President Roosevelt's program for packing the Supreme Court.

But where personal issues are involved, personalities cannot be avoided. It is not merely the court but individual members who are under attack. The conflict is between the personality of the President and the personalities of members of the court who do not think as he does.
